Hundreds Continue Search for Missing Child; Senator Key Pittman, Veteran Statesman, Dies

Hope Dwindles That Baby, 2, Remains Alive

Police of Nation Enlist- ed in Hunt; FBI Ad- mits 'Interest.'

Murray Upshaw Jr., two-year-old sandy-haired son of a prominent Bartow county farm couple, was still missing late last night — lost or kidnapped—and hundreds of men planned to continue an intensified search for him today as the police of the nation were called upon to be on the lookout for the hand-some tot and his dog, "Nicky".

During a gloomy day yesterday not a single additional clue was developed to throw any light on the whereabouts of the youngster who disappeared shortly before noon Friday from his home near Cartersville.

FBI "Interested."

The FBI, the dread of kidnappers the nation over, admitted "an interest" in the case yesterday but further comment than that was not forthcoming from Richard G. Danner, agent in charge.

Danner and Lon Sullivan, safety commissioner, conferred in Atlanta and Sullivan sent out a nationwide police lookout on the theory that the boy may have been kidnapped but still there were no ransom notes received and the little world that has enveloped little Murray somewhere remained silent.

Numerous were the reports to police in Georgia from people, deeply interested in the fate of the Bartow county child and its sorrowing parents, who sought to help, but investigation of their tips availed nothing. One such report in Atlanta was run down by city detectives to discover only an Atlanta couple had been out riding with its own three-year-old boy. State patrolmen were investigating a report Indians or Gypsies were seen Saturday at Thomaston with a white child in their car.

Still No Sign.

At Cartersville, Sheriff George Gaddis and more than 900 men plodded weary miles over rain-drenched hills again seeking the missing boy but still there was no sign. Today they take to the hills and fields once more—determined not to give up until there is no chance that sturdy little Murray might have survived the exposure.

Hope holds the boy's parents

George Is Expected To Succeed Pittman

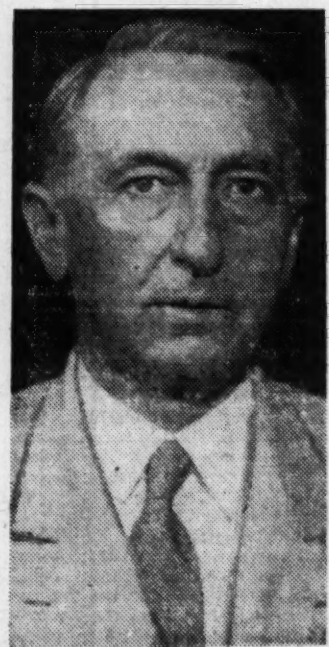

Georgia Senator May Head Foreign Rela- tions Committee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(AP) Soft-spoken Senator George of Georgia, long-time friend and confidant of Secretary of State Hull, is expected to take over the chairmanship of the powerful senate foreign relations committee, left vacant by the death of Senator Key Pittman, Democrat, Nevada.

George, who was renominated and re-elected to the senate in 1938 despite the expressed hope of President Roosevelt that he would be defeated, stands second in line among the Democrats on the 23-member committee.

Senator Pat Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, outranks him in service and by senate custom could have the chairmanship if he wanted it. But to accept it Harrison would have to give up his leadership of the equally important finance committee—a step the Mississippi senator's friends said he was not likely to take.

SUCCESSOR?—Senator George, second ranking member of the senate foreign relations committee, is expected to be elected chairman of the group to succeed the late Senator Pittman.

Rites Are Set Thursday in Reno, Nevada

Legislator Was Head of Vital Foreign Relations Committee.

By the Associated Press.
RENO, Nev., Nov. 10.—Senator Key Pittman, 68, chairman of the U. S. Senate committee on foreign relations, died at the Washoe General Hospital at 2:35 o'clock (Atlanta time), this morning.

The veteran legislator, who might have entered the senate six years earlier but for his high regard for a gentleman's agreement, suffered a heart attack early yesterday.

Although Senator Pittman was not in vigorous health when he came home to campaign successfully for re-election, it was not until last Saturday, when he failed to appear at a political rally here, that his illness became known publicly.

Taken to Hospital.

Monday night—election eve—he was taken to the hospital and his physician, Dr. A. J. Hood, disclosed that he had been in bad health throughout the campaign. Senator Pittman, first elected to the United States senate in 1912 for an unexpired term of four years, defeated Samuel Platt, Republican, in last Tuesday's election—his sixth successive victory for that office.

Governor E. P. Carville, an anti-New Deal Democrat, expressing regret at the senator's death, said he had made "no commitments and will take no action" in naming a successor until after funeral services Thursday. Pittman's unexpired term ends in January.

The senator's wife, Mimosa Gates Pittman, was at his bedside when death came.

The body, with a guard of honor from the Nevada National Guard, will lie in state Thursday in the state building where Episcopal funeral services will be conducted. The hour of the services has not been set.

Only Sought One Office.

Key Pittman, who never ran for any office except that of United States senator, sought that office first in 1906, the year Nevada decided to try the direct primary as an experiment. Prior to that time the Nevada senators had been appointed by the state legislature.

Pittman, at that time an attorney in Tonopah, made a gentleman's agreement with his opponent, George Nixon, Republican incumbent, that the man who received the majority of the popular vote, should have the senate seat. Nixon polled 9,729 votes, Pittman 8,624.

But the Democrats elected a majority to the state legislature and that body appointed Pittman to the senate. The Tonopah lawyer, however, asked the legislature to rescind its action and appoint Nixon. The legislature acceded to his request.

(President Roosevelt and other officials express grief at death of Senator Pittman. Story on Page 9.)

De Gaulle's Forces Take African Port

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(Monday) (UP)—General Charles de Gaulle's "free French" forces have captured the French equatorial African port of Libreville in Gabon, a radio report received here today from the Belgian Congo city of Leopoldville stated.

There was no immediate official confirmation available in London that Libreville had fallen to de Gaulle's forces.

TOMB FOR 300?—The Bucharest apartment house on the left is identified as the tomb of 300 men, women and children buried when it crumbled to the ground in the earthquake which inflicted tens of millions of dollars in damage on Rumania. The head of the construction firm which built the fallen building is said to have taken his life.

Roosevelt To Address Nation From Arlington

President Will Depart From Usual Custom of Observance at Shrine to U. S. War Dead.

By The Associated Press.
President Roosevelt, departing from custom, will speak to the nation today when he makes his pilgrimage to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier on this twenty-second anniversary of the World War Armistice.

In other years, the chief executive has journeyed to the tomb in Arlington National cemetery to lay a wreath and hear others speak, but has made no address himself.

His proclamation asking for commemoration of the armistice anniversary directed attention to the need "not only for peace, but for peace with understanding, not only for a cessation of hostilities, but also mutual respect in the intercourse between nations."

The three major radio networks made arrangements to broadcast Mr. Roosevelt's address (10:15 o'clock this morning (Atlanta time)). Also speaking from Arlington will be Milo J. Warner, national commander of the American Legion.

Among high officials to participate in ceremonies elsewhere will be Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, who is to address a Legion gathering at Columbia, S. C.

Late in the afternoon, special services will be held at the Washington cathedral tomb of Woodrow Wilson, the man in the White House during the war years.

The anniversary also was an occasion for renewed demands by several national organizations that the United States "keep out of war."

The American Youth Congress announced that "more than 3,000 youth organizations throughout the nation" would meet in effort to "stop warlike acts which bring America closer to war and dictatorship."

The Citizens' Committee Against War said in a statement that "on Armistice Day we frankly question the long steps which our country has taken toward war" and "deplore the vast strides toward Fascism in this country which the conscription act and the superarmaments program have led to."

Big Parade Here Today Marks Armistice Day

Atlanta To Be Shown Army's New Cavalry on Wheels; Ceremonies To Be Held on Tech Field.

Atlanta will join the nation today as it pauses—in a world torn asunder by another great conflict—to celebrate the closing of the first World War and to pay tribute to those who lost their lives in the first conflict.

There will be a six-mile-long parade in which soldiers of yesterday, today and tomorrow will march down Peachtree street to Georgia Tech's Rose Bowl field, where patriotic addresses and martial music will recall those soul-stirring days of 1917, when the youth of this county marched off to war and some did not return.

Starts at 9 O'Clock.

The parade will move promptly at 9 o'clock from Hunter and Whitehall streets.

Sharing honors with the veterans of 1918 will be one of Uncle Sam's newest mechanized units—the Sixth Cavalry—and crack R. O. T. C. units from which the government will draw its officer personnel in the future.

The Sixth Cavalry will give Atlanta a preview of Uncle Sam's growing military power. Made up of 52 huge truck trailers, 57 armored scout cars (light tanks), 75 single motorcycles and 50 motorcycles with side cars, this unit offers the very latest in military preparedness.

Governor-elect Eugene Talmadge will be the principal speaker at the Rose Bowl observance.

Britain to Speak.

Other events on the program will include a short talk by Dr. M. L. Brittain, of Georgia Tech, and patriotic songs by Miss Minna Hecker, Legion soloist.

The line of march will be as follows: Whitehall street to Peachtree street, to West Peachtree street, to Fifth street, to Techwood drive and then to the field.

All city and county schools will be open. All departments of the county and state governments will be closed. The City Hall also will be closed.

Nazis Forbid Belgians From Observing Day

German Opposition Makes Demonstration Threat.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 10. (AP via Berlin)—Belgium's Armistice Day celebration, created in 1922, was abolished today by order of General Alexander Von Falkenhausen, German military commander for Belgium and northern France.

Belgian sources said he acted on the suggestion of Secretary of the Home Ministry Vossen after the German opposition here had threatened a demonstration on Armistice Day.

The new order leaves Belgians the privilege of honoring soldiers dead annually on All Saints Commemoration Day, November 1.

It made no objection to celebrating King Leopold Day, November 15, by religious observances and the closing of schools but that day is to remain a work day.

The order forbade display of the national flag on November 11 and 15.

BERLIN TO IGNORE ARMISTICE DAY.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Armistice Day tomorrow brings no happy memories to Germany and will therefore not be celebrated as it is in other places.

November 11, 1918, found Germany on the losing side.

At Langemarck, France, however, the Germans today observed the 26th anniversary of the battle there in which so many young volunteers lost their lives.

Millions Flee In Panic; New Tremors Felt

Ten - Story Apartment House Crumbles To Bury 300.

By The Associated Press.
BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 11.—(Monday)—The most destructive earthquake in Rumanian history killed and injured thousands over the weekend, leveled whole villages, set raging fires in rich oil fields and caused millions to flee to open fields.

New tremors overnight added to the terror early today.

Between 1,000 and 2,000 persons were believed killed outright when the most violent quake struck at 3:39 a. m. (7:39 p. m. Saturday, Atlanta time).

Thousands were injured and homeless. The majority of buildings in 5,000 square miles of thickly populated areas were damaged.

300 Are Trapped.
Tens of millions of dollars in property damage resulted. Hardly a house in Bucharest was untouched.

Officials estimated that 300 men, women and children were trapped in a 10-story apartment structure, Bucharest's newest and most modern, which was reduced to a pile of 20-foot-high rubble, amid screams of the dying.

More than 100 convicts were killed in a destroyed penitentiary.

Campina, a thickly populated oil town about 100 miles northwest of the capital, was reported "in ruins," with refinery chimneys toppled and fierce fires started in plants, including those of Roman-American, a subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Hospital Trains Leave.
Ploesti, another oil production closer to Bucharest, was hard hit.

(Oil fields in the Ploesti region of Rumania were badly damaged by the earthquake, with nearly half the oil wells set on fire, the British Broadcasting Corporation said last night in a broadcast heard in New York by NBC. BBC quoted dispatches from Rumania.)

(It also said that damage in the earthquake was much greater than believed at first.)

Hospital trains moving over a dislocated railway system sought to reach Focsani and Galati, two

American Vigilantes in Britain Befuddle Coldstream Guards

LONDON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—If the first motorized American squadron of home guards in England can befuddle the Germans as well as it did the coldstream guards it will be a complete success.

The Red Eagle squadron of Americans held its first major field maneuver in a home counties "problem," its undertaking being to escort to the safety of a nearby English town an important English general who "had eluded capture by the Germans."

The Americans fooled the coldstream guards, who were supposed to be the Germans, into thinking Bernard S. Illoway, of Salt Lake City, Utah, was the general. They allowed him to be captured and then triumphantly escorted the real general to safety.

Newspapermen tried to follow the maneuver, but got nothing more than a nice ride through the lovely countryside and were as puzzled as the coldstream guards.

Once the reporters themselves penetrated a smoke screen in a road and "captured" a town to the disgust of the residents and the Red Eagle brigade.

General Wade Hayes, of Norfolk, Va., told the reporters he felt the squadron was "more important psychologically than as a military unit," because he felt it represented "the feeling and spirit of a great many Americans" who desired to help England.

His rambling, two-story home, standing behind a grove of tall larches in the heart of the Hampshire countryside, had been camouflaged to hide it from German airmen.

Yet, recently, seven bombs dropped close to it, at least one only 40 yards away.

So secret was Chamberlain's death kept for the first hours that the congregation of St. Michael's prayed this morning for the recovery of "our neighbor."

It was understood that Chamberlain's body would be taken to London within the next day or two and there already is talk of burial in Westminster Abbey, in whose crypts lie the remains of many of Britain's great.

(A story on the life of Neville Chamberlain will be found on Page 10.)

Earthquake Deals Blow to Germany

Free Pulpit, Press Called Hope of U. S.

Dr. Mackay Says People Must Guard 'Our Ramparts.'

A free and fearless pulpit, joining hands with a likewise free and fearless press is the best hope of leading this nation and the world away from the ghastly horrors of war, Dr. Edward G. Mackay, pastor of the First Methodist church, told his congregation yesterday.

Speaking on the subject, "The Ramparts We Watch," he said, "Armistice Day should no longer be merely a holiday but a time dedicated to rethinking the basic doctrines of democracy."

He pointed out that while the ramparts we watch are usually physical frontiers, "if democracy is to live" we must turn primarily to spiritual and moral frontiers.

"Military and naval strength are essential in a world threatened by dictators who ruthlessly strike down the liberties of unprepared nations," he said, "but freedom itself will perish if citizens are indifferent to safeguarding the ramparts which guard what we call our American way of life. These ramparts are religious faith, freedom for every man, tolerance, justice and the spirit of goodwill. When these fail freedom is on the way out."

"The church," declared the speaker, "faces its greatest opportunity in a generation as the champion of the moral and spiritual values underlying democracy. Flag waving and drum beating are idle gestures unless the nation rededicates itself to the fundamentals which have made it great. Armistice day should call every citizen to moral duty and spiritual service."

WHERE EARTHQUAKE STRUCK—Thousands of persons were killed, many more thousands injured and left homeless in a terrific earthquake early yesterday which destroyed entire villages, leveled masses of buildings in Bucharest and started destructive fires in Rumanian oil fields. Diagonally shaded area shows where the main temblors were felt.

Violent 'Quake Lays Waste To Rumania of the hardest-hit cities where death tolls were believed considerable. Focani, about 100 miles from Bucharest, was the epicenter of the quake.

A direct report to the Associated Press from Brasov, historic German Transylvanian city, said hundreds of roofs and large buildings collapsed, killing some, injuring a great many.

Bodies Recovered. Under the glare of powerful anti-aircraft searchlights pulled up by German army units, steel-helmeted soldiers and other workers early today still were digging bodies from wrecked buildings and homes in Bucharest and many other cities.

Panic gripped the citizens, who dared not return to their homes tonight for fear of fresh shocks and collapsing of weakened buildings.

They wandered in the streets, blacked out by an air-raid precaution since German troops moved into the country, or sought safety in the fields and woods.

A newspaper delivery boy said he watched the 100-foot-high apartment building sway, then pancake into a mound of pulverized dust.

"It took perhaps two minutes for the building to fall," he said. "All that time above the rending of timbers and stone I heard human screams. Then came sudden silence. A whole line of automobiles was parked around the building. I had noticed a young couple kissing in one of these. They are somewhere under there now."

Flash of "Blue Light." Persons who were up, at the time said the first sign of the disaster was a blinding flash of blue light.

(In New York, the Rev. Joseph J. Lynch, Fordham University, said that the "blinding flashes of blue light" resulted from the first wave of the earthquake as it reached ground surface.)

Three minutes of violent shocks followed, accompanied by the ripping, crashing noises of tumbling buildings.

The royal palace had its windows broken and walls cracked throughout, but the 19-year-old king and Queen Mother Helen were out of the shaken area, at the summer palace in Sinia.

Rumanian army headquarters was damaged. Windows cracked and ceilings fell in the United States legation, but United States Minister M. Gunther was out of the danger zone at his villa in the Carpathians.

Buckled tracks and collapsed bridges caused suspension of railway traffic throughout Rumania, and railroad officials tried frantically to get in touch with scores of trains whose fate was unknown.

Broken cables put the telephone service entirely out of commission for four hours, and it was only partially restored.

Galati, site of a Rumanian submarine base and city of 102,000 population on the Danube, suffered severely, as did Giurgiu, oil port on the Danube.

Nazi Plans Hit.

(These damages apparently were a hard blow to any immediate plans of the German general staff to initiate a large-scale movement of troops through Rumania in any Balkan campaign. It was probable, also, that production of vital oil supplies for the German military machine would be interrupted or slowed down.)

Thousands of German troops reinforced Iron Guardists, firemen, police and Rumanian soldiers in organizing parties to dig victims from the debris.

They were still removing debris tonight from the ruins of an apartment block in an effort to reach groups of men and women trapped in an air-raid shelter.

By a freak, a telephone in the shelter was still in service early in the morning when some of the half-crazed persons trapped there hysterically called police headquarters for aid.

Then the telephone went dead, and officials were unable to get an answer as to how many were there, deep under the toppled masonry.

The head of the construction firm which built the $2,000,000 building, one of the tallest and most modern in Bucharest, was reported to have ended his life.

A number of casualties resulted when the eighth and ninth floors of another apartment building collapsed.

Among the injured was Nicolae Mares, minister of agriculture, who was buried under plaster when the ceiling fell.

The ceiling of the Continental hotel, one of Bucharest's largest, collapsed and injured many.

Invalide in Rain.

The area about the Libbies hotel, largest in the city, was roped off for fear its dome had been weakened.

Beds of invalids were spread under trees in the city's parks, their lot made more miserable by a drizzling rain that fell in the hours after the disaster.

Galati and Focani still were cut off from communication with the capital, but it was reported nearly all theaters and public buildings there collapsed.

Scores of bodies were reported found in Galati, and the cathedral, Greek church, railroad station and largest factory were reported in ruins.

The first report from Focani said the entire center of the city had been demolished and surrounding villages reduced to a shambles with many victims.

Nearly 100 long-term prisoners were reported killed when the prison at Dostana was leveled.

Among the towns wiped out was Panciu, near Focani. Bacau, a city of 30,000 140

Greeks Trap War Machine 'Rescue' Army In Mountains Of Rumania

Italians 'Mowed Down Like Wheat,' Athens Claims.

ATHENS, Nov. 10.—(UP)—An Italian column attempting to rescue the Italian "lost division" in the Pindus mountains also has been surrounded by sharp-shooting Greek mountain troops, it was reported here today.

Italian supply trains enroute to the two columns were said to be under Greek military fire.

The Greeks asserted that they "mowed down the Italians" in the center sector of the front in the rugged Pindus mountains. The mountain trails were "full of corpses and the river red with blood," the Greeks said.

More prisoners were captured today, reports from the front said. The relief column, said by the Greeks to be the famous Venizelos Alpine division which had been assigned to "blitzkrieg" Greece, was said in Greek military circles "no longer to exist, having been captured or annihilated."

In the 6,000-foot mountains, so rough that not even mules can be used, Greek women brought ammunition on their heads to outposts manned by Greek snipers, this source said.

The Greeks were said to have harassed the Italians on every side so continuously that hundreds of Italian dead were left in the snow of the mountainside as prey for hungry wolves whose howling was heard through the night hours.

DUCE SENDS GENERAL TO SHAKE UP ATTACK

ROME, Nov. 10.—Premier Mussolini has dispatched his under-secretary of war, General Ubaldo Soddu, directly to Albania to shake up the offensive against Greece, the high command reported today, and Italian cavalry has been sent into action there.

miles north of Bucharest, also was out of touch with the capital. Apparently this city was the northernmost affected.

Academy Wrecked.

The military academy near Tergovista was so badly wrecked that students were told to go home.

German army fire-fighting units were reported to have controlled flames which broke out in the American-owned Romano-American Oil Company properties. The refineries may be forced to close for two weeks or more.

The Stau Oil Company offices were demolished. Many casualties were reported at Campina, an oil center 20 miles northwest of Ploesti.

In Bucharest, the suburb of Balaz was a scene of wide destruction, with the death toll still uncertain.

Stores and theaters were forbidden to reopen until an inspection of their condition is made, and schools were closed until the safety of the buildings is confirmed.

Heavy vehicles were forced to travel at a snail's pace to avoid shaking down trembling buildings.

Pedestrians stumbled over piles of debris strewn over the streets.

Emergency crews of the American-owned telephone system worked by lamplight to restore communications as full as possible.

Tram service in the city was at a standstill.

Pharmacies and building material stores were ordered to stay open all night.

Two taxicab loads of men and women were crushed by falling masonry. Other persons were killed and injured by falling balconies.

The quake was the fourth Rumania has experienced since April. Three of them occurred in the last three weeks, but were minor ones.

LEGATION CHECKS ON AMERICANS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Franklin Mott Gunther, United States minister to Rumania, reported tonight that all members of his staff "and Americans known to be residing in Bucharest are safe and well" and that "the legation is endeavoring to contact Americans in country districts and will report later."

Gunther told the State Department that "there was considerable property damage and two or three large buildings collapsed" from the earthquake. He said that the death rate "was roughly estimated at around 300 and the injured about the same."

Peasants Also May See 'Quake as Warning Against Iron Guard.'

(Editor's note: The following dispatch by a long-time United Press correspondent in Bucharest speculates on possible effect of the Rumanian earthquake which cabled dispatches do not convey.)

By F. C. M. JAHN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(UP)—There is a possibility that the earthquake catastrophe in Rumania may have far-reaching consequences for the Iron Guard government of General Ion Antonescu.

Superstitious peasants may well see in it a divine visitation punishing the people for the expulsion of the "anointed by God," King Carol.

There are far more realistic probabilities, the result of the destruction itself. The rich oil fields north of Bucharest and particularly the chief city of Ploesti are reported to lie in the zone of heavy damage.

Refineries in Area.

All the big petroleum companies, such as Anglo-Romanian, Romano-American, Unirea, Concordia and Redevinta, have refineries at Ploesti.

No one knows for sure yet what damage the quake did to the fields and to oil fixtures. Should fire have broken out in Ploesti damage might prove incalculable.

Presumably it was in the main to get control of the Rumanian oil fields that Germany sent men and material into that country in considerable strength. Crippling of the oil output might handicap seriously Adolf Hitler's air war against Britain in particular and his whole military program in general.

Earthquakes are quite frequent in the mountainous regions of Rumania, but seldom have they done serious damage to such cities in the plains as Bucharest and Galati.

Earthquake in 1802.

Bucharest had a devastating quake in 1802, when it still was a middle-sized town. The main damage then was done by fire, which swept the city as a result of the tremor.

After the World War a building boom set in. Tens of thousands of modest one and two-story houses were torn down and replaced by "skyscrapers"—8 to 12-story buildings. Some of them were thrown up with more speed than care.

Galati, Rumania's chief Danube port, only a few miles from the new Russian border, has a population of about 105,000, of whom 35,000 to 40,000 are Jews. It has a large garrison. Among its main buildings are a huge modern cathedral and the palace of the Danube commission.

Buzau is a thriving town of 36,000. It has a few notable churches dating from the middle of the seventeenth century.

Panciu and Romani are small towns of a few thousand inhabitants, each not far from Focani, on the border between Valachia and Moldavia.

Nazis Arrive Over London, One a Minute

Raiders Bomb Capital Methodically Despite Heavy Barrage.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—London was subjected tonight to one of the most intense bombing attacks it has sustained, and hours after the first alarm Nazi bombers were still criss-crossing the city, methodically planting their bombs despite furious anti-aircraft fire.

Several large fires were started. Firemen worked in a hail of bombs, for the flames provided an ideal target for the bombers.

Observers estimated that the enemy bombers were coming over at the rate of one a minute. The first flight of raiders ran into a thunderous barrage.

Until tonight, the raiders had avoided London and had concentrated sporadic raids on coastal towns in Kent and Sussex.

Three raiders were destroyed overnight, the air ministry said.

Meanwhile, aircraft of the British bomber and coastal commands in conjunction with the fleet air arms were said to have attacked a German-operated submarine base at Lorient and docks at Boulogne and Calais.

NAZIS ALSO SUFFER—Flames raged and damage was done these oil fields near Ploesti, Rumania, as a devastating earthquake ripped the country. Germany, depending greatly on the big oil fields of Rumania to run her mechanized army, may have suffered a serious setback in her plans for conquest.

Red Premier Leaves To Visit Hitler in Berlin

Molotov and High Nazis To Hold Important Parley.

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Russia's Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov left today on a special train for Berlin and conversations there with German leaders. His departure was marked by great ceremony.

The trip—Molotov's first outside of Russia—was announced last night in a brief government statement that he was going to Berlin at the invitation of the Germans.

Specific subjects to be discussed were not made known here, but that Molotov finally was making the oft-rumored visit to Adolf Hitler was seen as fresh evidence of the Soviet-German policy of friendship and co-operation.

The Russian press published the statement of the forthcoming visit this morning without comment. It did not publish the report from Rome that Italy's foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, probably would be in Berlin while Molotov was there.

It was considered certain in Berlin that Hitler personally would receive Molotov. Some Berlin observers believed they would talk about the effect of the

Mme. Lupescu was seen crying in the corridor of the hotel where she is staying.

This "self-cleaning" process starts after a few months of exposure under normal conditions of weather, but may be delayed under unusual conditions of dirt collecting conditions. Have You Any Question on Life Insurance?

'HINDSIGHT AND FORESIGHT' a weekly column by Holger J. Johnson, President Institute of Life Insurance

I HAVE had an inquiry put to me by a man who owns several life insurance policies: "You have been suggesting that I get in touch with my life insurance agent when I have a question to ask about my insurance. But I have moved lately and lost track of him. What then?"

There are several things you can do, depending upon the kind of question you want to ask. You can write to the company which issued your last policy and ask the question. Or, if it is something that requires personal consultation, ask the company to nominate a local agent to render you the service to which you are entitled.

You might also select a new agent yourself, by asking your friends—just as you would select a doctor or a lawyer. The good agent will be glad to advise you without your making any commitments.

40 Mules Drag Brush Piles in Search for Missing Child

Cold Drizzle Spurs Hunt in Cartersville

Father of Boy, Near Breaking Point, Comes to Atlanta.

By WILLARD COPE, Staff Writer.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Nov. 10. Forty mules managed by 80 Negroes were put to work today dragging 400 brush piles, resulting from logging operations in the pine covered hills back of the Upshaw farm, in the hope that two-year-old Murray Upshaw Jr., missing since Friday morning, might be found beneath the fallen trees still resting on the stumps. Sheriff George Gaddis' theory is that the child's clothing possibly had blended with the coloring of the trees and thus prevented the searchers from discovering the child, if, in fact, he has been lost.

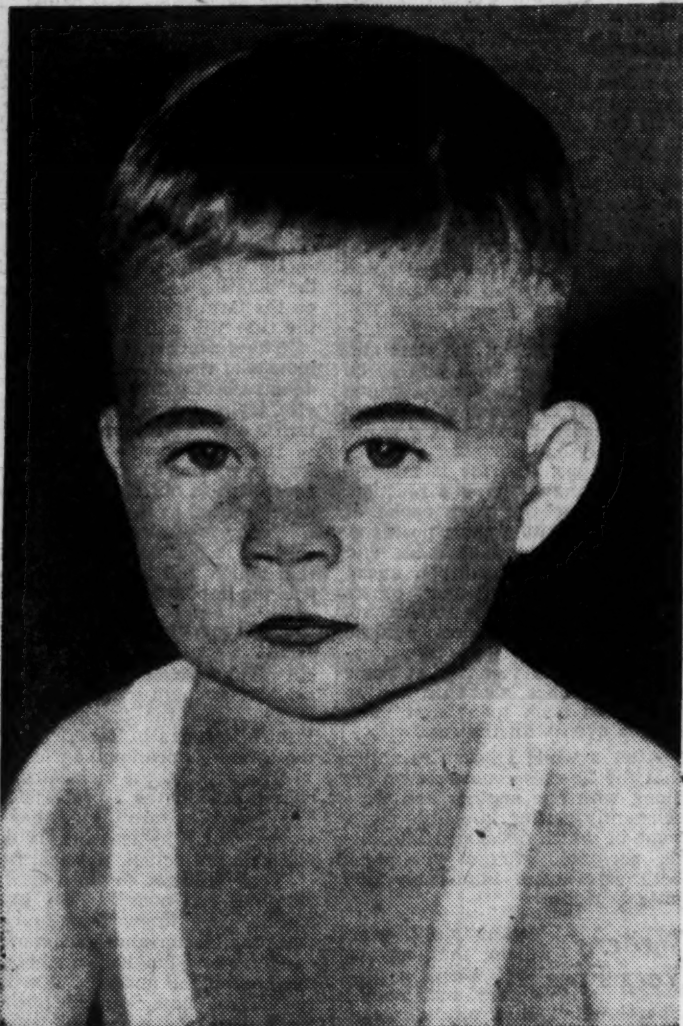

Hundreds of friends of the Upshaws in the Pine Log area augmented by volunteers from all over Bartow county continued today what was taking on the aspects of an almost futile hunt for the missing baby, the son of Murray Upshaw, a farmer, and his wife, the former Betty Raines, adopted daughter of the late Corra Harris, Georgia novelist.

Not even a cold and drizzling rain dampened the determination of hundreds of searchers as they wearily retraced every foot of the country for miles around the Upshaw home from which the child disappeared at 11 o'clock Friday morning 15 minutes after he had asked his mother to give him a baked sweet potato. At times as many as 900 persons, walking not more than four feet apart, participated in the hunt. Rain prevented the use of airplanes in the search today but that only intensified the efforts of those on foot.

While there has been no trace of the child neither has there been any sign of "Nicky," the small white mongrel dog, eight months old, with which the child was playing when he was last seen by his mother.

Sheriff Gaddis and Bartow County Commissioner A. V. Neal obviously were working today on the kidnapping theory although they spoke guardedly about that possibility. Commissioner Neal said briefly he "would wait a little longer" before adding to the $100 reward raised voluntarily Saturday among people in the Cartersville region.

During the early hours of this morning, the self control of Murray Upshaw Sr., father of the child, seemed near the breaking point, and he left his farm home shortly before daylight for Atlanta and the home of his cousin, Dr. C. B. Upshaw. (Dr. Upshaw lives at 394 West Wesley road). Dr. Upshaw had come to Cartersville

KIDNAPED?—Sandy-haired, two-year-old Murray Upshaw Jr. was still missing yesterday as the Federal Bureau of Investigation stepped into the case, investigating a possible kidnapping. Meanwhile, hundreds of volunteers continued their search for the missing child in the rain-drenched woods near his home.

Saturday to be at the side of his kinsman.

Dog Still Missing. Baby Murray's young mother, remained at the farm in care of neighbors and relatives. She was said to be trying unsuccessfully to rest momentarily expecting word of her son's fate.

Two similar experiences of children of this section, both of whom survived, were recalled today. One of them, 12-year-old Charles Darnell, lives at Emerson, three miles from Cartersville, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Darnell.

Mild Weather. Charles, 10 years old, wandered away after a family Sunday dinner of a great-aunt, Mrs. Kate Newman, on a farm six miles from Adairsville and was found 24 hours later asleep in a cotton patch two miles away. This was August 31-September 1, 1930, and the weather was mild.

In the other instance, Edna Bivins, also aged two years, was lost near Allatoona, seven miles from Cartersville, from 1 o'clock until 11 o'clock on a chill autumn afternoon and night five or six years ago. She suffered no ill-effects beyond scratches and bruises from walking uncertainly more than two miles over the rough countryside.

Edna now is believed by relatives here to live in Atlanta with her mother, Mrs. Julia Ward Bivins.

Other Adventures. Two other similar child adventures, which ended happily, one near Rome about a year ago, and another north of here near Chatanooga, also were discussed as the kindly folk of this countryside sought to bolster their hopes for the missing Murray.

The severe cold of last Friday night, however, and the lesser, but still dangerous chill and rain of last night, followed by today's thick weather, were mentioned with mournful head-shakes. It was not believed possible the child could have survived such exposure.

John Darnell, who with his sons early took part in the present search, was strongly of the belief the lightly-clad Murray had been taken away by someone. His wife, still keenly remembering the experience of her own son's disappearance, spoke of the rain of last night.

"I just couldn't sleep any more," she declared. "I was thinking of my own boy safe at home and this other little boy perhaps lying out there somewhere in the cold and wet. I hope for his own sake and his mother's that he has been kidnapped."

Hunt for Child Being Pressed By Hundreds

—but searchers who have examined the countryside for miles around the Upshaw home near Cartersville for more than two days say if the boy is lost and not kidnapped, he is probably dead now.

The distraught father of the missing boy made a flying trip to Atlanta yesterday to confer with his relative, Dr. C. B. Upshaw, of 394 West Wesley road, for several hours. "Our paramount object is to get our baby back" was the only comment after this talk by the two Upshaws.

According to highway workers engaged on a WPA project near Emerson, three miles south of Cartersville, they thought they saw a child answering little Murray's description in an automobile that was forced to go slow along a one-way route where highway improvement is being carried on. One of the men is sure he saw a dog similar in appearance to "Nicky," the child's play companion, which is also missing, in the automobile as it passed along.

Department of Justice Agent Danner declined to discuss this reported development or to supply the names of the men who made the report.

Support of the kidnapping theory was given in the statement issued yesterday by Sheriff Gaddis in going over the case from the time the mother gave her little son a cold baked sweet potato and he returned to the yard to play, only to be missing when she called him 15 minutes later.

Test Holes Probed. Sheriff Gaddis said, "If she started after him within a short time and called constantly, as she did for five hours, she would have attracted the boy if he was in the vicinity. This fact alone makes our investigation of the kidnapping theory logical."

No ransom notes have been received that the federal authorities would admit.

Except for the highway workers' report, there is little else to support the kidnapping theory. It is being advanced mostly for want of definite clues, since for more than two days nearly 900 men, including CCC workers and farmers of Bartow county, have tramped the area for five miles around the 3,000-acre Upshaw farm without finding a trace of the child or of the missing dog. Every test hole of manganese mines in the vicinity has been probed by dropping grappling hooks attached to ropes. These attempts have availed nothing and a further plan to drain water from the hole was abandoned.

Money in Circulation Shows Large Increase

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(P)—American money bulged with an average of $62.68 per person in coin and currency on October 31, the treasury calculated yesterday. This was $1.02 more than a month ago, and was the highest per capita circulation figure in history, except for a few days during the 1933 banking holiday. The treasury said $8,299,702,355 worth of money was in circulation, compared with $8,151,166,196 a month ago, and $7,342,362,637 a year ago. The per capita circulation a year ago was $55.84. It has been rising almost every month since then.

He was found and today is a healthy lad of 12, shown here with his mother, Mrs. John Darnell. During a dismal rain Saturday night the mother's thoughts strayed back 10 years as she thought of her own boy's disappearance. Charles and his father yesterday joined the search for missing Murray Upshaw Jr.

Ship Carries Gasoline to Japan After Finding U. S. One Big Jinx

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 10.—(P)—The S. S. Panamanian headed for Japan at last with 52,000 drums of gasoline in her holds.

The bulky craft slipped out of the Pelican Spit yesterday after a run of hard luck that seamen say rarely has been matched.

She came here two months ago for dry dock repairs and then went to Texas City to load 52,000 drums of gasoline.

There seamen of the CIO picketed her in protest against shipment of war materials to Japan. Bonus demands of the new crew were allowed.

The vessel shifted to Bolivar roads at Galveston. A Greek ship swung into her stern, forcing another repair job.

Finally she was ready to haul anchor.

But the government refused to give clearance papers. Another delay ensued for several days.

Finally the government gave the go ahead signal.

Once more the Panamanian was steamed up for departure.

Then the ship began to list.

Reward of $252 Posted for Child

The reward for the return of two-year-old Murray Upshaw Jr. rose to $252 last night—the voluntary contribution of neighbors of the prominent Bartow county farmer.

So far, however, there has been no official reward offered by county or state authorities.

Torpedo May Have Sunk U. S. Vessel

MELBOURNE, Nov. 10.—(P)—Captain Arthur P. Cronin of the United States freighter City of Rayville, said tonight that his vessel may have been torpedoed rather than mined when she went down last Friday at dusk in the Bass Strait with loss of one crew member.

She was the second ship to go down off the Australian coast within 24 hours. A British ship, the name of which was not divulged, sank Thursday after striking what was believed to be a mine.

Captain Cronin said that when the explosion occurred it seemed as if his ship had run ashore or struck a brick wall; but owing to the enormous volume of water which piled her decks he did not disregard the possibility that a torpedo may have sunk her.

Both sunken vessels passed unidentified ships; one crossed the bows of the Rayville shortly before the explosion.

Today, minesweepers at work in Bass Strait found several mines of foreign origin. The strait continues to be closed to shipping.

U. S. Ship in Shanghai To Remove Americans
SHANGHAI, Nov. 11.—(P)—The Matson liner Mariposa, dispatched from the United States to remove Americans from the Orient, arrived here today to take aboard 80 residents of Shanghai.

The engine room flooded and water seeped into the cargo holds.

No official pronouncement has come from the investigation of the accident.

Disatisfied with conditions surrounding the ship, its captain, Paul C. Grening, of New York, quit. In his stead was put the chief officer, 30-year-old hand-some Erik Kreuger, of Stockholm, Sweden.

At a huge cost, the ship was pumped clean of water.

Once more her steam was up, her crew at their posts.

Two crew men were scalded by escaping steam, and then, two libel suits were filed.

Todd Galveston dry docks sued for a $107,000 repair bill, and another concern sued for $12,905 allegedly due for towing. The differences were adjusted.

Young Captain Kreuger was not worried over the prospect of heading the Panamanian out to sea.

She's a fine old girl who's just had hard luck, thinks the captain. "Don't worry; we'll make it all right."

Japanese Leader, U. S. Envoy Meet

TOKYO (Monday), Nov. 11.—(UP)—United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew conferred with Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka for two hours yesterday at the foreign minister's request, it was learned today.

The conference was held in Matsuoka's official residence and the whole field of Japanese-American relations was discussed, it was said.

It was the first extensive exchange of views which has taken place since Matsuoka assumed office and especial importance was attached to the meeting because of warnings in the Japanese press that new and more severe strains upon Japanese-American relations may be expected as result of the re-election of President Roosevelt.

Three Americans Are Slain in China

SHANGHAI, Monday, Nov. 11. (UP)—Mr. and Mrs. Max Bernheim and their son, David, have been murdered by "Chinese bandits" at Changyi, near Kutsin on the border of Yunnan and Kwichow provinces, according to foreign messages today.

Five other children in the Bernheim family, described as former residents of Spokane, Wash., and attached to the Philadelphia Missionary Association, were wounded.

A representative of the United States consulate in Kuming, capital of Yunnan, has been sent to Changyi to investigate the murders which occurred on November 5 according to the messages.

No Comment From Mayor On LeCraw

Hasn't Read Statement On Charges, Says Hartsfield, Ill.

Mayor Hartsfield declined last night to comment on a statement made Saturday by Mayor-elect Roy LeCraw demanding that he (Mayor Hartsfield) prove his charges that "there is a small minority in city council aligned with the underworld element."

The mayor's charges were made in a written statement Friday when he approved a council ordinance taking from the 1941 police committee the authority to elect a new chief of police.

A new angle was added to the controversy yesterday by Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, who said he would request a grand jury investigation.

When called about the LeCraw statement, Hartsfield said he was ill at home with a cold and had not seen the newspapers. He said that he had made the same charges during the political campaign and added he would probably have something to say after he had read the statement.

In asking a grand jury probe, Gilliam said:

"Every member of general council is under suspicion as things are now. It appears to me that a grand jury investigation is the only way to re-establish confidence in the government. We cannot afford to ignore a charge so grave that it attacks the integrity of every member of city council. I shall stress these points in my letter to officials of the grand jury, and will urge that prompt action be taken to prove or disprove the charges, which I regard as the gravest made in Atlanta in many years."

Death Takes Holiday When Train Hits Man

BELLEVIEW, Ill., Nov. 10.—(P)—Providence smiled sweetly upon Alvin Becker.

His automobile was struck by a fast passenger train, dragged 100 feet along the track and thrown into a 14-foot ravine.

Becker crawled from the wreckage scared stiff but only slightly bruised.

Windsors Sail on Tour Of Backward Sections

NASSAU, Bahamas, Nov. 10.—(P)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor sailed today on a six-day inspection visit to several of the out-islands in this British colony.

The Royal Governor planned to see whether a project similar to the United States' Civilian Conservation Corps could be applied to backward communities.

Planet To Pass Across Face Of Sun Today

Atlantans' Chances of Seeing Mercury's Transit Are Slim.

A rare astronomical phenomenon is going to take place up in the sky over Atlanta and most of America today, but the chances of Atlantans being able to see it are very dim indeed.

Mercury will take one of its infrequent trips across the face of the sun, but the weather man says it will be cloudy here all day and that occasional showers will wet the faces of any persons who may be gazing upward during the afternoon in the hope of catching a glimpse of the planet's transit.

The planet, according to Judge John D. Humphries, senior jurist of the Fulton superior courts and one of Atlanta's star star watchers, is scheduled to pass between the sun and the earth, starting about 2:30 o'clock. The trip is the first since 1924 and the last to be seen in these parts until 1953.

He plans to throw the shadow of Mercury on a screen, if the sky is clear, but the weather prophet predicts that the gloomy weather of yesterday will continue for most of the northern portion of Georgia today. He thinks the high and low temperature today will be about 60 and 52 degrees, as compared with the range of 55 and 47 yesterday.

Judge Humphries witnessed Mercury's last trip across the sun through a telescope but he says looking at the sun through such powerful glass is dangerous to the eyes and he advises against that.

—Just in case the sun is shining here today.

Mercury orbit comes between the earth and Old Sol only 13 times each century and scientists glue their eyes on this calculation of the time system of the universe. The trip of the planet today will be especially unusual, it was said, because Mercury is scheduled to go directly across the face of the sun. Usually it appears just above or just below the line. For the benefit of those who probably won't see it, Mercury this afternoon will look like a black spot, 1-200 the size of the sun.

Comrades in Arms

On this Armistice Day the thoughts of veterans, in this country, of the war of 1914-18 must go back to those days when they fought side by side with Englishmen, Frenchmen, Canadians, Australians and all the others who then waged that successful struggle for human freedom; when together they crushed the menace of a mad militaristic power filled with the lust for conquest.

For today the same fight, for the same great cause, is raging again across the seas. Americans are not in the firing line this time, for which fact all America gives thanks. But today all Americans know, too, that the cause for which Britain and her allies fight is our cause, the same for which our boys died more than two decades ago on the fields of northern France. For it is the cause of free men, and of men who love freedom, everywhere.

All through the ages there have been men ready to fight and, if need be, to die for that precious human thing called liberty. And, as long as men remain men and women remain true to their heritage, freedom will be something worth dying for and something for which men must fight until it is attained.

All through the ages men have fought for this cause. And today the veterans of our own armies pause, not only in memory of their comrades who died, but to send a spirit message through time and through space to their eternal comrades in arms, those who fight or have fought, for that selfsame freedom we of America hold so dear.

It matters not under what banner they fought, nor in what war they died. It matters not how they died, so they died bravely. They shall all be reunited, in some new and timeless life, where the champions of right and liberty shall stand together, strong man meeting strong man, and know that forever they shall stand in the eternal rolls of fame, comrades at arms in the cause of freedom.

"The first setback for the Axis," says a seer, "will find the small nations swarming to Britain's side." Until then, the part of wisdom is to keep murmuring, "Oh, Adolf, you're so strong!"

Guilty on 44 Counts

An Atlanta police patrol car reports that it chased an alleged liquor car, at a speed of 90 miles per hour, a distance of 40 miles through the city streets, going into every section of the city except one.

The driver of the suspected car escaped, after inflicting minor injuries by hitting a man and damaging two other autos. The police state that, if the man is captured, he will face a total of 57 charges of various natures.

One charge is, of course, speeding. Then there are 17 counts of running through red traffic signals and 26 counts for ignoring stop signs.

The man, however, escaped. But, in the meantime, the officers who chased him are available. And, by their confessions, they are equally as guilty on 44 of the 57 counts—one for speeding, 17 for driving through red traffic signals and 26 for ignoring stop signs.

To stage an automobile race, at 90 miles per hour, through the city in the early night hours—it was between 8 and 9 o'clock Friday night when the affair took place—is a far greater crime than illegal purveying of liquor. Far better to allow the nefarious rascal to go his way, than to imperil the life and safety of everyone on the streets in such manner.

Less than two years ago an outraged public protested so vigorously at these reckless "chases" that the police were officially forbidden to indulge in them.

If that order does not yet stand, it is time it was resuscitated.

One by one, the gags that were good in '17 return: "So you're near-sighted," said the draft board examiner. "We'll put you in the front line, where you won't have so far to look."

The best-liked jokes in Japan are centuries old; which is also true of eggs in China. How strange, then, that neither side resorts to its deadlier weapons.

The Hope of Greece

Almost as heartening as the valiant Greek stand against the Italians is an obscure little item passed along by the cable desks from Istanbul. It reported that Russian troops are being withdrawn from the Turko-Russian border.

Had the opposite been true, the Mediterranean position of Great Britain would have looked increasingly darker. As it is, Russia's action is tantamount to freeing Turkey for whatever collaboration is advisable to halt Axis penetration in the direction of the vital Dardanelles. So long as Russian troops remained along the Russo-Turkish border, Moscow retained a strict veto power over all Turkish policy. That they have now been shifted indicates strongly that Turkey's future actions have been well charted and that any Axis movement through Bulgaria or beyond Salonika will meet with Turkey's vaunted 2,000,000 bayonets.

Many things involved in the Near East bear examination today. There have been many surprises, not the least of which has been the masterful employment of tactics by the Greek border forces. The Koriza action is simple, effective and listed in military books the world over. The Greeks took a leaf from Marathon. Hannibal and his Carthaginian legions used it in another day when they might Rome's captains blundered. Ludendorff mastered it on the western front. A football coach would call it the mousetrap, and Ralph Waldo Emerson's oft-quoted little adage about the world beating a path to the door of the man who invents a better mousetrap may yet find recognition in the field of international power politics. The Russian action may be an indication.

Another surprise is the unexpectedly good equipment apparently in the hands of the Grecian troops. Despite the favorable ground on which the Greeks fight, by all standards Italian equipment if correctly utilized should have precluded operation of the Greek tactics on the Florina front, as distinct from the Jannina front, on which Italian troops are being cut up in guerilla warfare. We may assume that the Greeks have been obtaining, in complete secrecy, British equipment, and more important, supply stores. It is not beyond the realm of possibility that the surplus stock of rifles sold to Britain by the United States is now contributing to the ruddy cheeks of the Italian high command.

Yet another surprise has been the vitality of the Greek air force. By all modern standards, this corps, listed as a strength of 120 planes, should have long since been wiped out. Instead, it is bombing Italian concentrations, Italian invasion ports and driving off Italian bombers from the principal cities. There may be more than rumor to the story that Russia has provided a quantity of planes to the Greeks. Britain undoubtedly has, and as soon as bases are established the RAF itself should be able to take up any slack resulting from losses.

It is too early to see the trend of the Italo-Grecian fighting. If the Italian army can be kept from spilling out onto the plains below the mountain buttresses; if the Greeks can obtain a steady flow of supplies and ammunition; if casualties can be kept to a minimum; if British bombers can destroy Albanian and Italian port facilities on the Adriatic; if Grecian casualties to first line troops can be kept to a minimum until replacements are available, either Grecian or British; if civilian morale can stand under Italian bombings; if all these things can be accomplished; then there is a chance that the tides of war may turn along the borders of Greece. It is a slim but the businesslike manner in which the entire operation is being conducted on the part of the Allies give rise to an optimism which may be false, but is nevertheless heartening.

It indeed is no second Norway, and the fact that the British have been moving methodically and slowly hints that an unexpectedly thorough plan of operation has been devised among Greece, Britain and Turkey. The next few weeks should tell the story.

Editorial Symposium

SABOTAGE AND DEFENSE.

"Plants in this country turning out munitions that may be used against the Nazis are logical objectives of German destructive action," says the PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER, which continues: "Hitler can't very well send his bombers to wreck them. But agents working here can obtain the same results without vexing complications. . . . The Black Tom and other explosions during the World War present ample illustrations of this technique. There is no reason to believe that the present-day saboteurs of the Reich would not turn to such methods again, given the chance."

"All munitions plants require policing of the most thorough kind, furnished without delay," says the LOS ANGELES TIMES, which believes the plants also "require protection from asinine rulings by the National Labor Relations Board interfering with the control of management over personnel—it will be remembered that the NLRB ordered the reinstatement at the Douglas aircraft plant of sit-down strikers, among them an alien whose employment was illegal. They also require protection from labor-coddling local authorities who yield to the contention of the unions that they have a right to picket national defense industries." And the PORTLAND OREGONIAN declares, "The menace of sabotage to defense measures is real. . . . A decentralization of industry, a location of units in smaller communities in the interior, would offer much protection against war from within. In the smaller towns the newcomer is observed with stronger curiosity than in the city. Plants can be better guarded. And if sabotage gains entrance its devastation is restricted."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

DEFENSE COMMISSION TEMPEST WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The honeymoon has ended at the defense commission, as honeymoons will always end, in government as in marriage. Fairly well-defined factions are visibly taking shape, and disputes on policy are beginning to break out between them with increasing frequency.

For example, an extremely significant and remarkably bitter dispute preceded the defense commission's announcement that Donald Nelson, chief procurement officer of the commission, had also been named director of small business activities. Since small business offers a vast reservoir of productive capacity as yet untapped by the defense program, and since Nelson, a former Sears-Roebuck executive, is both a businessman and a moderate, the announcement appeared innocuous enough to the ordinary eye.

MONTAGUES AND CAPULETS The story of the announcement begins, however, with the introduction into Nelson's office of two New Dealers, Peter Nehemkis, from the Securities and Exchange Commission, and G. L. Boothe, from the Federal Reserve Board, who are far from innocuous in the eyes of certain of the defense commission's more suspicious conservatives. Nehemkis and Boothe were brought in, apparently with endorsements from both New Deal and business sources, to study the problem of tying small business into the defense program.

After a good many weeks' work, Nehemkis and Boothe devised a plan, putting the small business problem in the hands of a subcommittee of the defense commission. Working with the Federal Reserve Banks, this subcommittee was to investigate the capacities of small business for defense production, and particularly for sub-contracts on primary contracts allocated to large manufacturers. It was to induce the large manufacturers to offer the sub-contracts, and the small businessmen to accept them. And to effect these purposes, it was given certain wide powers.

The Nehemkis-Boothe plan, embodied in an elaborate report, was referred to the defense commission as a whole. Thereupon Commissioner Edward Steinitz moved that the plan be re-examined by a new group. Two members of his staff, Blackwell Smith, a New York lawyer, and William Batt, of the SKF Company, were alarmed by the conference of powers proposed by Nehemkis and Boothe. They had persuaded Steinitz to make the plan be re-examined by a new group. Two members of his staff, Blackwell Smith, a New York lawyer, and William Batt, of the SKF Company, were alarmed by the conference of powers proposed by Nehemkis and Boothe. They had persuaded Steinitz to make the plan be re-examined by a new group.

This little group had hardly met before the fur began to fly. Smith, an able lawyer, tends to regard all New Dealers as fiends in human form. The New Dealers have something of the same sort of suspicion of men like Smith and Batt. Smith, supported by Blackwell, declared that the Nehemkis-Boothe plan would usher in "another NRA," and charged that the two authors had written into it absolute control over priorities, the most vital of all defense commission powers. Nehemkis and Boothe stood their ground, accusing Smith and Blackwell of "speaking only for big business." They were backed by Nelson, who told the Smith-Blackwell-Batt faction they were "seeing rats under the bed."

For a time feeling ran so high that little was accomplished except fancy name-calling. In the end, however, a compromise was arranged. The Nehemkis-Boothe plan, modified to meet some of Smith's objections, was approved by the commission.

MORALS IN THE TALE This slightly ludicrous little tale can be interpreted, according to the readers' prejudice, as a horrid proof of the New Deal's celebrated "hunger for power," or a shocking demonstration of the selfishness and obstructionism of men with big business affiliations. At this very instant, here in Washington, it is being told all over town to prove both points. To the discerning eye, however, the points it proves are of quite a different character.

First, it shows that if the nation's productive capacity is to be efficiently mobilized under the defense program, businessmen must do most of the job. Nehemkis and Boothe are harmless, able fellows, but the businessman's suspicion of the government-man is now such that any plan emanating from a government-man is viewed with violent suspicion by businessmen. The suspicion may often be groundless, but business consent is the practical prerequisite of putting the management of the defense program on a firm basis without further delay, for such disputes arise as much from the vagueness of the defense commission's authorization, and consequent looseness of organization, as from anything else. And third, by the mere violence of the dispute, it illustrates the unwisdom of extreme, unyielding views of any sort on governmental matters.

"Beyond The Equator."

Joe Loewinsohn, an acquaintance of long standing, who has a habit of dropping into this office at unannounced intervals and paying a brief visit devoted to the telling of the latest anecdotes around town—such anecdotes!—has blossomed forth in the role of novelist.

"Beyond the Equator" is the title of his first opus, a story of a scientist seeking to harness tremendous sun-power, or to smash the atom, or some other achievement on that order, and the troubles that beset him. International spy troubles, greed of rivals troubles and even the troubles of a woman seem to develop when the germ of romance infects a couple of young people.

I had the privilege of reading "Beyond the Equator," in MSS form quite some months ago. Feel I'm not qualified to judge its qualities properly, as I understand considerable revision and editing was done before it was finally submitted to a publisher.

Joe is, of course, filled with pride. Just like a new father. He has hired a book that, he freely admits, is beautiful in its pristine cover and blurb wrapper. I suppose, in due course, Joe will sell the movie rights of his novel and become a plutocrat. And there'll be an elaborate world premiere, here in Atlanta, home of the distinguished author. With visiting stars and Hollywood dignitaries, etc.

All I hope is that, at the big banquet in his honor, Joe doesn't shock the assembled guests with one of those stories which bounce off his scarred and weather-worn hide every time he comes into this office.

To Set World Afire?

I've been kinder worried ever since last Friday afternoon. Saw something of a store, then, which had me puzzled.

It was one of those cut-rate places—I was purchasing cigars—and they had a very low price on those boxes of book matches. You know, with 50 of the books to each box.

Well, the man ahead of me at the counter was buying matches. He took five boxes and would have taken more but the polite salesman told him five was all they were permitted to sell, at that price. I remember, in customer.

So he walked out with five boxes under his arm. Fifty books to the box. That makes a total of 250 books. They average 22 matches to the book. Which makes 5,500 matches. What on earth does one man want with so many matches? At one time?

They used to say that a really smart man went to London to "set the Thames on fire." And I've heard all my life of the geniuses who "set the world afire."

I'm sure that anyone would be able to set most any thing afire with 5,500 matches. With one match, for that matter, come to think of it. Applied in the right place.

Perhaps Kindling?

Perhaps he is going to use those matches in the kitchen stove. Or the drawing room fireplace. I've seen patent kindling blocks which are supposed to be sure starters of fires, but they all were priced quite a lot higher than the cost of one of these boxes of 50 books of matches. And 50 books of matches scattered in a fire you want to start, should prove quite effective kindling. Or even 10. There's an idea. Matches as kindling. Wouldn't be at all expensive.

While on the subject of kindling, what do you use when you want to start a coal fire? Newspapers and wood? Probably. I recall, as a boy, how my father taught us to make kindling out of old newspapers that would start a coal fire unaided. There was a special way of twisting the paper, and leaving a sort of short, loose fuse, that made it burn brightly for a long time. You didn't need dry wood at all to start a fire, with old papers fixed that way.

We had a box beside the fireplace always kept full of the prepared paper and it was one of my own boyhood duties to keep that box well filled.

Folks nowadays don't have the patience, or the thrift, for such adaptations. They'd sooner spend a few cents for bundles of kindling wood than take the trouble to manufacture their own. Which, perhaps, is why so many of us are always hounded by debts and just half a jump ahead of the sheriff.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(The views expressed here are Mr. Pegler's own.)

Bigoted Liberals NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—In the last eight years I have learned at least that there are no worse bigots than the men and women who call themselves liberals and work at it in print and on committees for or against this or that. Sometimes they get apologetic jobs on government commissions in which they are likely to kick up mischief because they are so intolerant.

Soon after the New Deal came into power it began to appear to me that to get along with a liberal you had to concede him many advantages at the start and keep on agreeing with him or be denounced as a reactionary, which is supposed to be something very bad. Actually, a reactionary is not necessarily bad, for after a movement has gone so far it may be a good thing to have a reaction. In the other way they spoke of it as consolidating their positions. An advance would be made and some unit would run on ahead of their objectives and others wouldn't quite make theirs, so, after time the advance would be halted while the gains were established. This meant that some of the advance elements had to be hauled back to a front more or less even with the rest.

After a while I began to notice that the liberals couldn't ever get along with one another, and were constantly getting into little spats, some of which developed into bitter personal grudges in which both sides were implacably and bitterly right.

Writers Very Free

It certainly was plain that anyone that wasn't a professed and labeled liberal didn't have any rights at all which they felt obliged to respect. Their writers were very free with personal insults and sneer based on sheer gossip, and they would rewrite imaginary facts or assumptions about people whom they didn't know at all until these untruths came to have the value of truth with them.

They are, on the average, very bad reporters, and because they are always pleading one cause or another they habitually conceal facts of which they are aware but which conflict with their own representations. If you scan the roster of the original New Deal writers and bureaucratic fuss-buckets and track down the individuals now, you will find that many of them have broken away in hatred.

As to their regard for truth, I could cite the reaction of the liberals to the recent appeal of old John (Longwood) Lewis on behalf of Wendell Wilkie. This was an appeal or exhortation, and not a command, such as the unions of Sidney Hillman, and David Dubinsky had delivered to their subjects on behalf of the candidacy of President Roosevelt. Nevertheless, Lewis now was bitterly denounced by people who had been his friends as one who had betrayed labor, which just meant that the man was supposed to have no free choice of a candidate or any right to recommend his choice to others.

And that is only part, but the liberals then discovered that Lewis had been a dictator for years, in the words of one excessively liberal publication, "a vindictive, ruthless despot who does not brook the slightest disagreement."

True Now, True Then

That may be true, but if so it was true when I was saying substantially the same thing three years ago and catching half-bricks from the liberals as a dirty reactionary with a pocketful of brass checks. It took the liberals a long time to admit the truth of remarks which they denounced me for uttering then, but, of course, they knew the truth all the time.

"When," this liberal paper asks, "has Lewis held as free an election in the United Mine Workers and in the CIO as the people of this country will have on November 5? Never!"

These winsome little qualities in Mr. Lewis were not discovered until he exercised his right as a free citizen of the republic to vote for a candidate of his own choosing and to recommend his candidate to others. But the liberals needn't be feared if you understand them.

The thing to do is to keep constantly posted on what they are up to and treat them as something that got on your shoe. They are mostly noise, and an honest man has the advantage, because truth and tolerance simply are not in them.

Leopards Invade Towns

Leopards are becoming bold in Livingston, South Africa, and vicinity. Two women taking a stroll in the city were surprised by a pair of leopards in a vacant lot. Women and beasts disappeared in opposite directions. Provincial Commissioner Cooke and a partner were playing golf on a leopard strolled across the fairway, sat down on a huge anthill and watched the golfers for a few minutes, then yawned and strolled away.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

TODAY IN KANSAS CITY Thomas Hardy wrote a poem many years ago which had a rather long title. It is called "In the Time of the Breaking Up of the Nations." It begins:

Only a man harrowing clods
In a slow, silent walk,
With an old horse that stumbles and nods
Half asleep as they stalk.

Only the smoke without flame
From the heaps of couch grass;
Yet this will go onward the same
Though dynasties pass.

He was right. The man and the fields, the harrowing of clods, the planting of seeds, will go on though dynasties pass. The man on the farm still is the backbone of any nation just as the man with the rifle still is the backbone of any army.

The farmer has never had a square deal since the time our industrial revolution caught up with and passed him. The tremendous rush of industry surged on past him and left him caught in the vise, trying to sell in the old way, before there was industry with its tariffs and protections, and buy in the new way.

It has taken him a long time to begin his own revolution. He was unwilling to begin it. He didn't understand what had happened. It is not a clear thing in the minds of the economists who have worked at it, drawn the maps, the charts.

Today in Kansas City there begins a convention which is significant. It is more significant to rural states than any other convention which will be held. It will have no immediate benefits. But it is the hope of the future—and its inspiration.

MAN AND THE PROBLEM

The Future Farmers of America, high school boys and those just out of high school, who have studied or are studying in vocational agricultural high schools, are in convention at Kansas City.

They are the delegates of the thousands of chapters of the Future Farmers of America from all over America. In no state in the Union is vocational agriculture progressing so well as in Georgia. These boys, the delegates, and those who selected them, have chosen farming as a profession. They are proud of being farmers. They work at farming as they go to school. They actually do the work. Their home work is actual work. Their projects, closely checked, are actual, physical projects.

They will not go "in a slow, silent walk, with an old horse that stumbles and nods." They know the value of mules and of live-stock. They know how to co-ordinate it. But they know, too, what the tractor and machinery will do.

The "new-fangled" methods do not seem strange to them. The meaning of soil analysis, of soil conservation, of terraces, of sanitary rearing of hogs, of chickens; the knowledge of how to repair machinery, of how to build feeding pens; of how to feed out cattle and pigs, of how to build feeding floors; of how to care for live-stock; of what breeding will do—all these things they know.

I do not mean to say that here is a Utopia. But I do mean to say that the vocational schools of agriculture are the finest hope of the future for an agricultural state. They supplement and complement the splendid work of the county agent and the 4-H Clubs.

I do not say that all those who go into them will come out a success. I do say that most of them will. And they all regard their work, not with despair or distaste, but with enthusiasm and pride.

THE DELEGATES

There are more than 200 high school vocational agricultural departments in Georgia. There ought to be one for every high school in rural Georgia. There ought to be a vocational school for every city.

They are not merely for the schools. There is not one which does not hold adult classes; which does not become a part of the community through a canning plant and other phases of community work.

The delegates are interesting. Behind them are the thousands of boys who are members of the various chapters. Georgia has a farm boy who won from every contestant in the southern states and this week speaks in the national FFA speaking contest. He is Hanley Vansant, of Douglasville. Alpha Fowler, also of Douglasville, after an outstanding record of actual work on a farm, is a candidate for the office of national president.

Guinn Smith, of Whitefield county, operates his mother's farm and goes to school at Valley Point. Myrvin Clark operates a 300-acre leased farm and is buying land of his own from the proceeds of his work with a varied agriculture. They and Fowler will receive the degrees of "American Farmer."

Four teachers, whose boys won district honors, are along on the trip. They are H. L. Simpson, of Sylvestre; W. K. Warren, of Harlem; J. L. McMullan, Jefferson, and T. G. Scott, Griffin. Along also are H. M. Belcher Jr., president of the Georgia association of FFA, Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, always interested in vocational education; M. D. Mobley, the very able state adviser of FFA and director of vocational education, and T. G. Walters, state secretary.

I put down their names because they are much more important to the state than any football or baseball team which ever went away to play an important game and had carried in the papers the list of those making the trip.

This really is important to Georgia.

Farming is going on, though dynasties pass. It is important to understand it.

Man Chooses the Seed to Plant But God Determines How It Shall Grow

By ROBERT QUILLEN

At the beginning of our era, when the fashionable resort city of Pompeii was buried under volcanic ash (and so well preserved that bawdy pictures on bedroom walls seem suspiciously modern), there lived in Rome an important citizen named Pliny who wrote charming letters to his nephew.

These letters, which are priceless as footnotes to history, are made doubly fascinating by their intimate revelations of unchanging human nature.

Pliny owned a farm and spent a great deal of money to beautify it. In one of his letters he told about employing a certain contractor to erect a row of marble columns down each side of his driveway.

Visiting the farm to inspect this work, he found the columns leaning this way and that. "I made him do the job over," he wrote. And then he added: "Some day that fellow will learn to use a plumb line."

Go back farther in time, to the ancient city of Ur in the Chaldees. Archaeologists, digging in the mound of dust that marks the site of ancient glory, came upon a clay tablet whereon a distracted mother had confided to some relative her anxiety concerning her daughter. The girl wasn't bad; but she was getting out of hand, and she had developed the habit of staying out very late at night. (Kipling might have written it: "He learned about women from Ur.")

We forget how old the world is, and how many times it has witnessed the same scenes. Because the present is all-important to us, we exaggerate its importance in the scheme of the universe.

The Bible prophecies of coming doom seem to fit this particular time, and once more, as in 1918, the good seem to stand at Armageddon and battle for the Lord in the last great conflict before the end. But all of this has seemed true to other generations, in other times of war and famine and pestilence, yet each in turn has lived to see a brighter day. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

History repeats itself because human nature repeats itself. If it is human nature to be evil, it is also human nature to be good. And 5,000 years of history bear witness that the good somehow triumphs in the end. Whatever evil man may do, God still reigns and the sun still rises after the darkness

Mr. Reeves Dictates Note to Dictator About Dictation

Just a moment, Mr. Hitler, let us whisper in your ear, you can eat this with your sausage—you can drink it with your beer; we have heard you have a notion to set out across the ocean and to introduce some blitzkrieg stuff to people over here.

You have had some quick successes; you have thumbed your nose at God, you have blasted sanctuaries where the feet of saints have trod, but the hour of fate is hastening with the instruments of chastening and your back will bear the wounds and welts of retribution's rod.

You have filled a book with threatening, you have had a lot to say of "divide and rule" and "Empire that is under Nordic sway," but we're not a bit excited, for this country is united and "divide and rule" won't work in this, our grand old U. S. A.

You are flirting with disaster, you are on destruction's brink; though we think of you as brother to the noted missing link, let us ask you: "Where's the Kaiser?" You'll be infinitely wiser if you'll take a rest and give yourself a little time to think.

Cats and Turtles

"Why doesn't the cat live longer than it does?" inquires Wickes Wamboldt in the Waycross Journal-Herald. He says a 10-year-old cat is a pretty old cat. But cats are supposed to be awfully tough and reputed to have nine lives. Well, if they don't serve their nine sentences concurrently that would give them around 90 years, which ought to be enough for a cat.

Maybe that's what your cat is thinking about when he is curled up before the fire, dozing and extending his claws and tearing bits out of the rug. Maybe he recalls his five previous lives and the fun he had and reflecting that if anything happens to him the next time he yowls in some neighbor's back yard he still will have three more lives to live on.

Mr. Wamboldt, being a philosopher, thinks 10 years is plenty for a cat. He believes a cat doesn't develop after that. Has no more intelligence, information or usefulness. Or character. Perhaps less.

Then he asks about the tortoise, popularly supposed to live several hundred years. He can't recall any instance in which a tortoise rose to fame or riches or achieved anything really worth while in life. You'd think that in a couple or three hundred years even a turtle would invent something or write a book or learn to get on his feet again after you'd turned him over on his back. But no. He shows no gain in intelligence and he has lost whatever speed he ever had, if any.

I may be wading out of my depth because I don't know any tortoises and if I did I wouldn't know how old they were. They do find them on their backs, but if I were a boy and had a knife and a tortoise and felt like carving dates I think I'd pick one like 1492 or 1776—just for the hell of it. After my sculpture had been rubbed in the mud a few weeks I'd bet it would look as genuine as those stones recording the history of that lost colony of Roanoke.

Two Greatest 'Hams'

Hollywood columnist calls John Barrymore the greatest self-admitted "ham" of the screen. That may go for the films but not for the stage.

Oldtimers may recall Corse Payton, who played all around Brooklyn and the Bronx and Jersey City for years in lurid melodramas. He was invariably kidded by critics who went to his shows for lack of something better to do.

Finally, Mr. Payton made the big time. And frankly billed himself on the 24-sheets as "Corse Payton, the best bad actor on Broadway." Which he undoubtedly was.

Which reminds me of Olsen and Johnson, who appeared for a couple of seasons in a nutty extravaganza—once at with Engler and afterward at the Georgia. Or was it the Capitol?

I liked them immensely. In an extended review I labeled their opus "The Best Second-Class Show in America." Did they get mad? They did not. They built their nuthouse into a Broadway show called "Hellzapoppin'," which is still running. And they used that line in their billing—to start with.

I hear they're putting "Hellzapoppin'" on the road, with Atlanta's Erlanger included. I hope so.

Wait a While

Broadway columnist says television, which everybody thought would be getting bigger and bigger by now, is entirely off the air. "which must make people who paid $500 for their see-and-hear sets very despondent withal." Which doesn't disturb me. Only radio star I wanted to see in action is Charlie McCarthy. I was curious to know whether Bergen does move his lips.

John Hamilton, Bride-To-Be Pause Here

Will Be Married in Few Days, They Reveal in Tampa.

John D. M. Hamilton, former executive director of the Republican national committee, and his bride-to-be, the socially prominent Mrs. Jane Mason, of Washington and Tampa, paused briefly here yesterday between planes at the municipal airport.

During their wait at the airport they posed for pictures, and later at Tampa they announced their engagement and approaching marriage.

They said the ceremony will be performed "in a few days" at Mrs. Mason's Tampa home.

Hamilton resigned his G. O. P. committee post Saturday. Previously he had served as national committee chairman.

Mrs. Mason obtained a divorce several weeks ago from her husband, George Grant Mason, a member of the Civil Aeronautics Board. Hamilton was divorced from his first wife, the former Laura Hall, December 29, 1937, in Topeka, Kan., where Hamilton practiced law.

Mrs. Mason was the former Jane Kendall, of Washington society, and once was described by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge as the most beautiful debutante she ever saw at the White House.

Before Mason's appointment to the aviation board he was an aviation executive in Cuba and there Mrs. Mason was known as "the first lady of the American colony."

Questioned by reporters as to his plans for the future, Hamilton said:

"I haven't anything to say. I retired from public life yesterday (Saturday) and I resigned from all committees. Anything else you want to know you can ask Mrs. Mason."

Gainesville Youth Is Killed in Crash

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Nov. 10.—(P)—An Army truck ran into a bridge abutment and hurled Private R. S. Cagle, 23, of Gainesville, Ga., to his death in the Kalamazoo river today.

Coroner Willard Putnam said that Cagle, attached to the Fifth Signal Corps at Fort Custer near here, was stunned at the impact and drowned in the river.

Cagle was riding with Private Charles B. Clapsaddle, 25, the truck driver, who will testify tomorrow before a Fort Custer investigating committee.

Cagle's body, after military funeral services tomorrow, will be sent to Gainesville.

ROMANCE IN POLITICS—John D. M. Hamilton, Republican leader, is seen here with his bride-to-be, Mrs. Jane Mason, of Washington, as their plane paused at the Atlanta airport enroute to Tampa from the nation's capital. The couple admitted they will be married in a few days. Hamilton resigned Saturday as executive director of the Republican National Committee.

AFL and CIO Prepare for Conventions

Labor Peace, Racketeers, Lewis' Retirement Main Problems.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(P)—Leaders of the AFL and the CIO headed today for separate conventions of their organizations with such momentous questions to the fore as labor peace, the future leadership of the CIO, and preventing racketeering in the labor movement.

The AFL will convene November 18 in New Orleans and the CIO on the same day in Atlantic City. Leaders of the rival groups already were gathering in the convention cities, however, for a week of preliminary conferences.

Preparations for a gala celebration of the CIO's fifth anniversary may be somewhat dimmed for partisans of John L. Lewis since he assured a radio audience on October 25 that if President Roosevelt were returned to power, he would retire as CIO president.

AFL leaders have indicated that Lewis' retirement probably would be a signal for the reopening of AFL-CIO conferences looking toward a reunion of the labor movement.

One of them said it would be a "golden opportunity" to heal the breach and that the federation would make plans to return to the peace conference table as soon as possible, perhaps before Christmas.

F. D. R. Urges French - Nazi Parleys Ended, The Red Cross Laval Asserts

Organization Has Essential Part in Defense, He Says.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(P)—President Roosevelt asked the American people tonight to give generous support to the Red Cross which he said had an essential place in the nation's "great program of national defense."

Red Cross chapters will begin tomorrow their annual membership roll call, to be continued through the remainder of this month.

"Our people have learned through the years," Mr. Roosevelt said in a statement, "to turn to the Red Cross for practical aid in any emergency and that high trust always has been fulfilled. Behind this great voluntary relief organization is a record of public service, both in time of war and peace, which makes it an inseparable part of our national life."

"As chief executive of the nation and president of the Red Cross," he added, "I strongly urge all who possibly can do so to join the Red Cross during this period of annual enrollment—Armistice Day to November 30. It is a call to which I am sure the American people will proudly and cheerfully respond."

The roll call itself was launched, with a radio program (all networks) on which Norman H. Davis, Red Cross chairman, said the goal was "every American a member."

Russia Mobilizes Boys, 14 to 17, for Labor

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—(P)—Russia started mobilization today of boys from 14 to 17 years old for the state labor reserve corps. It was announced that 862,000 applications had been received.

toward a reunion of the labor movement.

One of them said it would be a "golden opportunity" to heal the breach and that the federation would make plans to return to the peace conference table as soon as possible, perhaps before Christmas.

DeGaulle Reported To Have Landed Troops in Gabon.

VICHY, France, Nov. 10.—(P)—Vice Premier Pierre Laval said in an official note today after returning from a conference with Reichsmarshal Goering that there would be no further peace negotiations with Germany until the war is ended.

The note said there never was a question of negotiations for peace to replace the armistice as long as their was war with Britain.

The note, which followed a cabinet meeting, added a criticism of the actions and propaganda of General Charles de Gaulle, leader of "free" French forces which, it declared was creating a difficult atmosphere in France, contrary to the "new spirit" created by the meeting last month between Adolf Hitler and Chief of State Marshal Philippe Petain.

Laval, on his return from Paris, heard that the de Gaulle forces were fighting a "full-fledged" war in Gabon, French Equatorial Africa, with Petain forces there.

Maroons Push Vols and Rebels in Three-Cornered S. E. C. Chase

BY JACK TROY

Anything Can Happen

Now that the Richmond Spiders have beaten the University of North Carolina, it to be assumed the football fans of the country will agree that anything can happen.

Georgia was upset by Florida, but the fans hadn't seen as much action in 11 games.

They saw such things as a blocked punt and a touchdown following it; field goal, safety and extra point. They saw a runner completely in the clear fall down when he tripped over his own feet. Pat Reen already had run a long distance before he suddenly fell on his face.

And then, too, the fans saw Georgia lose a sure touchdown when a pass was dropped over the goal line.

The almost 20,000 fans saw variety and action. And if they were Florida supporters, which the majority were, they saw the 'Gators play their best game against Georgia in 11 long years.

Not even in 1937, Harry Mehre's last year, did Florida play such a game as that. Florida simply beat Georgia, 6 to 0, on a blocked punt. There was nothing fancy like last Saturday's game produced.

All that lacked was for Georgia to click with last-minute passes and score again. Which the Bulldogs might have done the way Jim Todd was flinging aials.

If Georgia had scored again, and the fans were not at all sure what to expect, the score would have been 19 or 20 to 18, and nobody would have left the stadium immediately.

They wouldn't have had the strength. As it was many left breathing hard. It was that kind of game.

Funny Work

The fans also saw one of the oddest exhibitions of officiating in that or any other series. The officiating did not have a thing to do with the outcome of the game. Neither side was hurt by anything that transpired. It simply was a matter of how the officials looked to the crowd.

They lost a down, for one thing. And were saved by Florida intercepting a pass. What they would have done if Georgia had kept the ball is interesting to contemplate.

Officials allowed Coach Tom Lieb out on the field several times to talk to his players without being accompanied by an official. They allowed Lieb on the playing field when a play was being run.

They weren't on their toes, at all. They couldn't even measure five yards. Several times on five-yard penalties six yards were assessed and they'd have to recalculate.

Once Coach Lieb went out on the sidelines and argued lustily. They held an unofficial officials-coach meeting, and in the presence of almost 20,000 witnesses the officials had to correct a gross error in measuring off yardage for a penalty.

It is well that Arthur Hutchens, chief of Southern umpires, was present. He could see it all with his own eyes. He also saw Cliff Kinsey intercept a pass and have it taken away when it was ruled he was out of bounds. He was more than a yard inside.

To cap the climax, a Georgia player fumbled a ball out of bounds and the official on the play signaled violently that it was Florida's ball. A grade child knows better than that.

So when he had to change the decision, which happened to be the rule of the day, the fans rightly scoffed and booed. They began to wonder if they knew what it was all about.

The Unexpected

It's the unexpected that makes football such a great game. Take the Southern Cal-California game on Saturday. The vaunted Trojans, who have ruled the coast for two years, were preparing to drive home a clinching score against the Golden Bears.

The Trojans, leading 7 to 6, were deep in Golden Bear territory and threw a pass, a logical play. What followed wasn't so logical.

Jim Juravich, Golden Bear sophomore star, intercepted on the goal line and ran 100 yards for a touchdown. Extra point was added. In a twinkling the under-dog Golden Bears were out in front and they went on to win a smashing victory, 20 to 7.

The Golden Bears have a late December game scheduled with Georgia Tech at Grant field.

Bowl Eligibles

Almost seems certain now that Stanford will be the coast champion this season—the west coast representative in the Rose Bowl.

Only time will tell if there is to be a definite tie-up between the Big Ten and the big coast bowl. It doesn't smack of logic, but many things have happened in California that would have made Mr. Hoyle raise his eyebrows.

The fact remains that at least three of last year's Bowl teams will be invited to play somewhere—Tennessee, Texas A. & M. and Boston College.

A. & M. is on the verge of ruining the old tradition that a Southwest champion never repeats. Jarrin' John Kimbroughs don't come along every season, either.

Jim Farley in Final Stages Of Deal To Purchase Yanks

CLEVELAND, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Smith Davis, Cleveland broker, said tonight that former Postmaster General James A. Farley would arrive here tomorrow to enter into final stages of a deal for purchase of the New York Yankees baseball properties by a syndicate of investors.

Farley is expected to be active head of the new organization.

Davis said he expected the purchase would be consummated "before the end of this month" but that certain details remain to be completed.

"Of course, we had to wait until the election was out of the way to permit Farley to go ahead with the Yankees matter," Davis said. "Farley will make all announcements."

Reliable sources have indicated that a number of men in widely scattered cities would combine to purchase the Yankees properties from the estate of the late Jacob E. Ruppert for between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000.

The deal is expected to include the Yankee stadium in New York and various other properties connected with the organization.

Tech Cripples Will Be Ready For Tide Tilt

Return of Wright and Muerth Will Bolster Jacket Line.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

If there are any Tech fans who think the Jackets will defeat Alabama next Saturday at Grant Field they may gain additional hope in that Red Muerth and Jim Wright will be back in the lineup for the first time in two weeks.

However, there are not many around who believe the Jackets will even make a good showing against the powerful Crimson Tide, 25-0 victors over Kentucky, a team which trounced the Techs, 26-7, Saturday.

But chance or no chance, Muerth and Wright will help Coach Bill Alexander's defensive setup no little. The red-headed tackle is considered the best on the team and his absence was missed sorely in the Duke and Kentucky games.

TACKLING MISSED.

Wright has been hampered with an ankle injury for a month. He didn't play at all in the Kentucky game. He has played very little in that time and was not effective the time he was in there. Needless to say, his terrific tackling while backing up the Tech line was badly missed.

If there are no new injuries in practice this week—and don't bet on it—the Jackets will be in fairly good condition to meet the onrushing Red Elephants of Frank Thomas. Every man who saw service against the Wildcats will be ready, as there were no new injuries in the game.

Any solace can be gained from a 26-7 defeat must come from the play of Jack Marshall, a husky sophomore end from North Fulton, who performed brilliantly in the game.

Marshall replaced the injured Harry Arthur shortly after the bruising contest began and played nearly half the game. His defensive work was good enough to cause one of the Tech coaches to say, "He was the best man on the field for us today."

Only 17 years old and not fully grown, Marshall weighs 185 pounds and stands over 6 feet tall. Before his time is out you will be hearing a lot about him.

HOOD ALSO HOT.

He was taken out of the Kentucky game toward the last part of the third period when Bob Ison was moved back to end in order to give the Jackets a better passing attack. Marshall isn't a great pass catcher but he'll learn and when he does he will be a good man.

Red Hood, third-string guard, also played well while in there. Marshall and Hood were in the lineup in the second period when the Techs outplayed the Wildcats after a disastrous start.

According to present plans, Ison and Cavette will remain in the backfield for Alabama.

Dukes Defeat St. Mary's, 7-6 On West Coast

Duquesne Eleven Comes From Behind to Upset Favored Gaels.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Duquesne University's Dukes celebrated their first football up to the west coast today with an upset 7-6 victory over St. Mary's bigger and more powerful Gaels.

The Dukes, terrors of the Allegheny and beaten only once this season, came from behind in a thrilling fashion in the third period to take the lead. After St. Mary's had scored a touchdown four minutes after the opening kickoff.

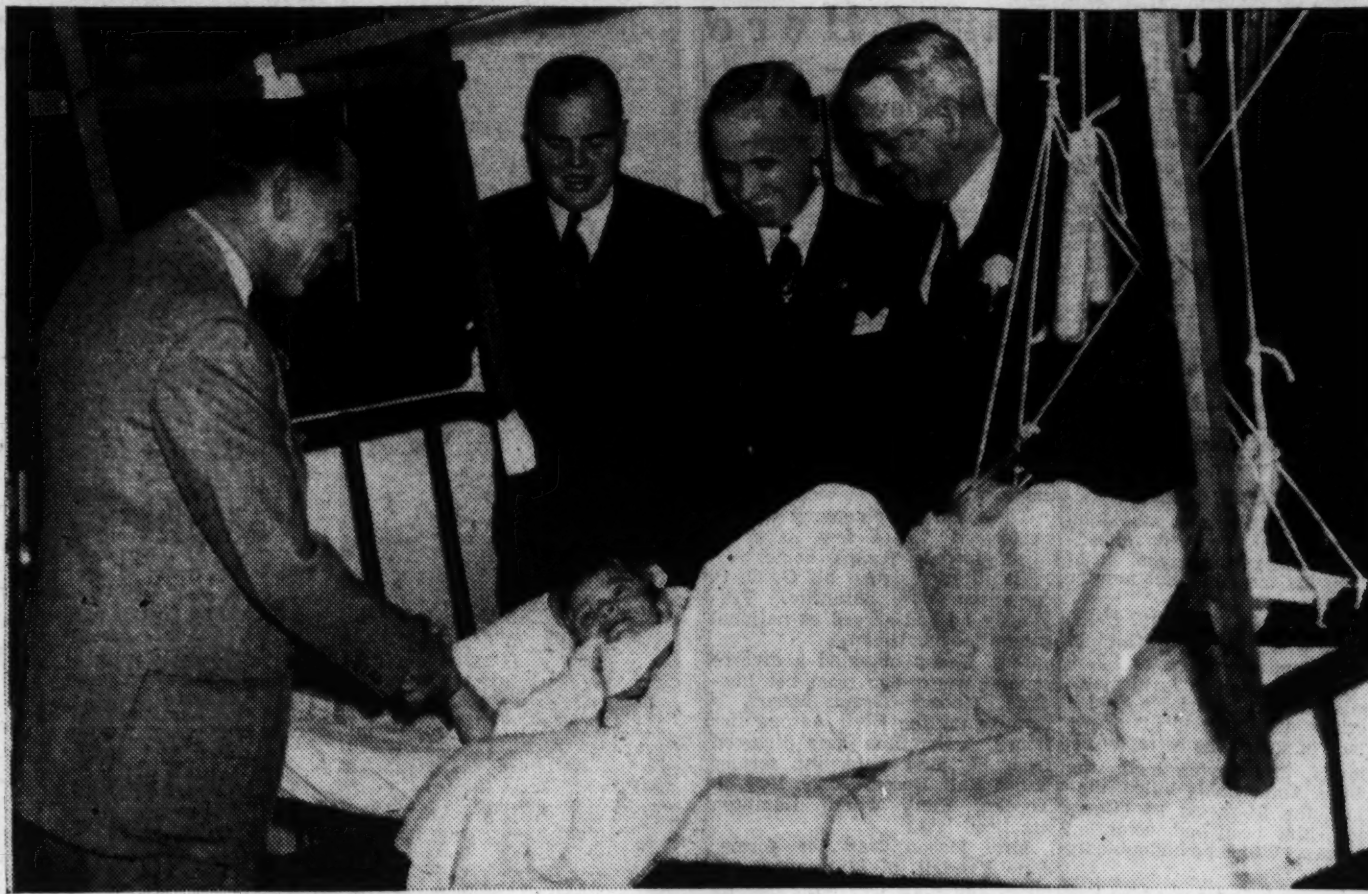

John Rokisky, substitute left end, proved the hero of as wild a gridiron melee as has been seen this season in these parts. After the Dukes had put the ball into play 23 yards from scoring try as the result of a weak St. Mary's punt, he took a pass from Allan Donelli, speedy backfield star, good for 19 yards.

It put the ball on the 4-yard marker, and John Binato, sub fullback, dented the big St. Mary's line for the touchdown. Rokisky, fitting a false kicking toe onto his shoe, booted the placement that won the game.

Score by periods:
Duquesne 0 0 7 0—7
St. Mary's 0 0 0 6—6
Duquesne scoring: Touchdown, Binato (sub for Gaels). Point from try after touchdown, Rokisky (sub for Mallisawski) (placement). St. Mary's scoring: Touchdown: Marefos.

The Spotlight

By GRANTLAND RICE.

THE BATTLE OF THE GIANTS.

Sporting pages this swiftly passing autumn have been filled with ballyhoo for Cornell, Minnesota, Michigan, Texas A. and M., Notre Dame, Tennessee, Stanford and many others. But the real battle of the giants takes place in Boston on Saturday when Boston College and Georgetown meet.

In the first place, they have an amazing record of victorious marches. Georgetown hasn't lost a game since Hector was a pup. Only Florida has checked the Boston College onslaught in the last two years—barring Clemson's fine win in the Cotton Bowl.

But when we say giants in this case, we mean giants. We mean earnest athletes ranging from 220 to 280.

Mal Stevens, of N. Y. U., and Herb Kopf, of Manhattan, have, between them, played both teams. Both admit that Georgetown and Boston College are bigger than the Green Bay Packers, the Chicago Bears, or any other pro team. Their weight average has been given out in the general neighborhood of 211 pounds, meaning each man on the first teams. And some of the substitutes run above 250.

This should be the collision of the mastodon and the mammoth—something that hasn't taken place since the Pliocene age—or is it the Neolithic?

They may not be the two best football teams in the world, but they are at least among the best, for both have speed as well as bulk. Doolap, of Georgetown, can travel the hundred in 9.7. Mal Stevens, of N. Y. U., is willing to wager a cigarette light that Doolap can outrun any back in the country, including the fleet Franck, of Minnesota. Boston College has passers and fleet runners in addition to her 260-pound Chuck Gladchuck at center, the roving dinosaur, who can leap from crouch to crag, according to Herb Kopf.

AROUND 500 POINTS.

Boston College and Georgetown have already approached the vicinity of 500 scoring points.

Who or whom have they played? Well, together they have played in nearly 80 points against Tulane and Temple combined, which are certainly no shove-arounds for anybody. Boston College alone has scored 60 points against Tulane and Temple.

How many teams would like to wager some mere trifle they could equal this count against these teams?

As Coach Haggerty and Leahy admitted, "We'd be much obliged to play any good teams who'll play us."

It was around Lexington where sports were fired that were supposed to be heard around the world. It will be in the same neighborhood that the clash and crash of flesh against flesh may be heard almost as far. Boston College has a star end in Goodresult, one of the country's best. This should be a whacking good game, with the accent on the whack.

Two Georgia Sophs Fired For Breaking Training Rules

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 10.—Two sophomore football players were fired from the Georgia squad here today for what Trainer Fitz Lutz described as "infraction of training rules."

Oliver Hawk, end from Kingsport, Tenn., and Charlie Bausch, guard from Memphis, were barred from the team by Lutz, and both left school immediately to return to their homes. Coach Wally Butts, who returned from the Florida game via auto, upheld Lutz' decision upon arrival late this afternoon. Hawk was a reserve end and had made all except the Florida trip with the Bulldogs. Bausch, a 200-pounder, was on the Red Devil squad.

Record Crowd for Frosh Game Is Predicted by Committee Here

Shriners Plan Gala Show Before Kick-Off; Visit Is Paid 62 Children at Scottish Rite Hospital.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

A record crowd for this year's Scottish Rite hospital game between Georgia and Tech freshmen was predicted last night as the general committee in charge of the contest made a visit to the hospital and later adjourned for dinner at the East Lake Country Club.

This year's game will be the 25th anniversary of the Scottish Rite hospital, the mother of all Shrine hospitals for cripple children, and the game will be built along that theme.

The Shriners will hold a gala show before the kickoff and between halves. All the bands and various organizations of the Atlanta Yearab Temple will stage a patriotic program as an added attraction to fans, who already are assured the biggest dollar's worth in history, as the game is always a real treat.

Touching Sight.

It was a touching sight to see the 62 children at the hospital, their legs and arms in plaster casts but smiles upon their lips. All one would have to do to pay his last dollar or 50 cents for a ticket would be to visit the hospital and see those kids, all ages, smile bravely from their beds, although their arms and legs looked hopelessly crooked.

But their cases are not hopeless. There are today 50,000 young people walking who would have never had a chance except for these hospitals all over the nation. And the Scottish Rite is the mother of them all.

The movement was started right here in Atlanta. It has grown into a national affair, and it is only fitting that this year's classic be dedicated to the mother on her 25th birthday.

Lack of Treatment.

Take the case of Donald Hill, for instance. He is a snaggletoothed kid from Homer, Ga. He is 13 years old. His leg was fractured. Lack of medical treatment sent him to the hospital with an "un-united fracture." That's what it reads on the card at the foot of his bed. He lies there day after day, his leg suspended in the air, with weights and ropes pulling at his injured leg, getting it back in shape so he can some day walk again.

He doesn't know when he will get up. But he lies there smiling, and if you question him closely he'll tell you his leg "hurts a little bit all the time." Donald Hill is typical of 61 other children in the hospital. Your dollar, or half dollar, if you sit in the south stands, will help Donald walk again. In addition you'll see a jam-up football game.

Thomas C. Law, one of the three co-chairmen of the football committee and slated to be the imperial potentate of all Shrine units in the country next year, served as toastmaster at the dinner. He introduced everyone present, and short reports on activities concluded the meeting.

Steelers Beat Eagles, 7 to 3; Detroit Wins

Game Played in Rain at Forbes Field; Victory 2d for Winners.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Two teams that before today had only one game between them in the National Professional Football League met in the rain in Forbes field today and Pittsburgh's Steelers triumphed, 7 to 3, over the Philadelphia Eagles. The victory was the Steelers' second; the Eagles have won none.

Blue Devils And Clemson Hold to Lead

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 10.—(AP)

Duke University's Blue Devils will lay their Southern Conference football title hopes on the line Saturday in the renewal of the colorful series with North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

A crowd of more than 42,000, the largest ever to witness a game in Keenan stadium, will be on hand for the clash which has been a sellout for two months.

Duke, undefeated in the loop and conquered only by Tennessee in outside campaigning, will have the favored role over the crippled Tarheel squad, which has broken even in eight contests.

The Blue Devils rolled over strong Virginia Military Institute and Wake Forest Clubs by 23-0 margins and trounced Davidson 46-13 yesterday. Duke also was impressive in swamping Georgia Tech and winning over Colgate.

North Carolina's title hopes were blasted early in the season when Wake Forest came through with an upset triumph, but the Tarheels looked good in defeating Texas Christian and losing to Tulane, 14 to 13, as the result of a blocked punt in the final two minutes of play.

V. M. I. Alumni To Meet Tonight

R. B. Pegram Jr., president of the Atlanta Virginia Military Institute Alumni Association, announced last night that the association will meet at the Atlantic Company tap room at 7:30 tonight. The gathering will tune in the radio to the National Defense program broadcast, on which General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, will be the speaker. General Marshall is a V. M. I. alumnus.

Ace Punters And Passers Ride to Front

Aerials and Kicks Hold Spotlight in Day of Heavy Scoring.

By PRICE HOWARD.

Associated Press Sports Writer. An epidemic of touchdowns, passing and superb punting left the Southeastern Conference's top nks unchanged today as Alabama, Kentucky and Florida advanced nearer the leading trio of Tennessee, Mississippi and Mississippi State.

Ten of the 35 touchdowns in the eight games involving Southeastern eleven were produced in the air. The Mississippi State Maroons rang up all their touchdowns overhead in beating Louisiana State, 22-7, covering 120 yards in three flips that kept the Maroons as potential title threats just behind the Tennessee Vols and the Mississippi Rebels.

PUNTING SUPERB.

Great punting staved off several threats and set up other touchdowns in a weekend producing only one minor upset. Alabama kickers averaged 43 yards, including a boot by Jimmy Nelson that the Crimson Tide recovered three yards from goal. From there Alabama plunged over quickly and went on to beat Tulane, 13-6, after a Greenie punt backfired and rolled back within 26 yards of the goal, setting up the other Tide tally.

Nelson punted out of bounds within Tulane's 10 yard line constantly. The Green Wave kickers averaged 41 yards themselves.

Florida upset Georgia, 18-13, in a battle of passes which totaled 392 yards and manufactured three of the game's four touchdowns. The Georgia sophomores, upset victors over Auburn a week ago, could not net only 19 yards from rushing against Florida's improved team, but the Georgians harassed the 'Gators with 286 yards in the air. These included Jim Todd's 21 end 43-yard touchdown passes to two other Georgia sophomores, Fendren Mitchell, also a sophomore, flagged a 41-yard payoff aerial to complete Florida's feat of scoring by every method known to football.

Florida stalled on a blocked punt, as did Auburn's alert Plainsmen in whipping strong Clemson, 21-7, and the 'Gators also counted on a field goal, a safety and an extra point. Auburn's alertness and power, combined with punting that averaged 45 yards, gave Clemson its second defeat—both at the hands of Southeastern eleven.

Kentucky's power offset Georgia Tech's passing attack to give the Wildcats a 26-7 decision over a Tornado revamped because of injuries. Tech staved off a shutout by plunging over following a 40-yard pass.

VOLS COAST.

Tennessee threw in a 21-yard aerial for good measure in coasting to a muddy 40-0 victory over Little Southwestern (Tenn.), featuring V. Thompson's touchdown gallops of 33 and 37 yards and one by Johnny Butler for 32. While the Vols reeled off their seventh straight win, the Mississippi Rebels were thumping Holy Cross, 34-7, with another star performance by Little Junie Hovious and big Merle Hapes. Vanderbilt gave Sewanee a 20-0 beating in the latter's only S. E. C. test this year.

Rams Defeat Giants, 13 to 0.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Vic Spadaccini intercepted two forward passes, once to run 60 yards for a touchdown and again in the fourth period to set up another, as the Cleveland Rams whipped the New York Giants, 13 to 0, today in a National Professional Football League game before 23,614 fans at the Polo Grounds.

Packers Swamp Cardinals, 28 to 7.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The Green Bay Packers, fighting grimly to retain their national professional football championship, swamped the Chicago Cardinals, 28 to 7, before 11,364 chilled spectators today.

Redskins Suffer First Defeat.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The Washington Redskins suffered their first loss of the National League professional football campaign today, 16 to 14, to the Brooklyn Dodgers before 34,000 howling fans at Ebbets Field. After scoring seven straight victories the Washington eleven was beaten because its speedy back, Dick Todd, was tackled behind the goal line for a safety in the second quarter.

Georgia Tech Freshmen Invade Auburn, Today

Frosh Stars Of Old Rivals Match Speed

Dave Eldredge To Lead Running Attack of Yearling Engineers.

By AL SHARP.
AUBURN, Ala., Nov. 10.—Georgia Tech's freshmen, stronger than they have been in years, will meet Auburn's Yearlings here tomorrow in the annual Armistice Day football game. The battle will start at 2 o'clock.

The Techs have played only one game this season, gaining a 7-0 tie with Mississippi State, while the Auburns have beaten Florida, 9 to 0, and Georgia, 6 to 0, and lost to Howard, 12 to 6.

POLISH ATTACK.

The Atlanta team will take advantage of the opportunity tomorrow to polish their attack for the battle with Georgia at Grant field, November 21. On that day, Tech's frosh will try to wipe out the bad linking they took at the hands of Siskiwit and company before 25,000 fans last season.

The Atlanta game is played for the benefit of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

Tomorrow's engagement, which is termed "a natural," will furnish a line on just what to expect from the varsities of the two schools in the next few years. Alumni are interested in the contest, and a crowd of about 4,000 is expected if the weather is good.

Jim Pharr, center from Fort Payne, Ala., and Don Wilkes, speedster from Ocala, Fla., who plays fullback, have been stars for the Auburn frosh this year.

ELDRIDGE KEY MAN.

Dave Eldredge, of Miami, Fla., probably will be the leader in the Tech backfield. He is listed as one of the two greatest running backs to enter Tech in the past decade. The high-powered line of the Baby Jackets, star-studded with fine high school players, boasts Ed Ryckiele, a 10-second man.

The game should give fans a line on the Tech-Georgia Freshman classic, because Auburn stopped the Bulldogs, 6 to 0. Auburn halted the Techmen, 10 to 0, last year.

Tuggle Dairy Is a Show Place Along Briarcliff Road

One of the Most Modern Dairies In the County

Operated for Years by C. C. Tuggle and His Two Sons.

By PRESS HUDDLESTON.

Beginning as a boy with his father in the dairy business, C. C. Tuggle, now in robust middle life, has built for himself and his family one of the most successful dairy farms in this section of Georgia.

The C. C. Tuggle Dairy Farm is located at 3200 Briarcliff road, where it was originally established, and where, over its 100 or more acres, the present owner once roamed as a barefoot boy.

C. C. TUGGLE.

Now at this most modern dairy—inviting and sanitary to the last degree—Mr. Tuggle and his two sons, A. C. and R. W., look after the care and the milking of 150 high-grade, blood-tested cows, most of the herd being Jerseys.

With a volume of about 300 gallons daily of the finest, wholesome milk, the dairy is sending its products—as it has done for years—to hundreds of homes and restaurants and hotels, and the like, all over the northern and eastern section of Atlanta.

The Tuggle dairy handles only its own milk—produced on its BOTTLING AT TUGGLE'S DAIRY—Here is shown the new bottling devices just installed at the Tuggle Dairy Farm, on Briarcliff road. Left, A. C. Tuggle and R. W. Tuggle, two sons of the owner, who assist the father in conducting the large and popular dairy.

Briarcliff farm—and its recent erection of a new and modern pasteurizing and bottling plant has made it one of the ideal plants in the whole country. Customers are provided daily with its own pasteurized milk, with Grade A raw milk, with rich, creamy butter, milk, or with the richest of cream, just as the customer desires.

In its new plant every modern device is installed for handling its milk—for pasteurizing, for bottling, for cold storage, for washing and sterilizing bottles—everything essential that produces wholesome milk. Many mothers in this city are careful to see that their babies are supplied with Tuggle dairy milk, for, as Mr. Tuggle suggests, "there is no better milk in the world." Every bottle carries a hood and seal, thus better protecting the contents. The dairy manufactures its own ice in a newly installed plant.

If you are careful about the milk you use—and you ought to be—drop out along Briarcliff road some day and inspect this new and unusually sanitary dairy. Mr. Tuggle or his courteous sons would be glad to welcome you and show you through an ideally clean and sanitary dairy.

Rich in Vitamins and Food Value. Especially good for babies... DELIVERED AT YOUR DOOR

Dolly Dimple Cosmetics Go in Carload Lots

Atlanta Laboratories Distribute Products All Over Country.

One of Atlanta's growing and most successful plants, whose name is known all over this country and in nine foreign countries, is the Dolly Dimple Laboratories, owned and operated by local businessmen.

The laboratories were established here in 1927, founded by L. D. Shearin and his late father, E. C. Shearin. Since its beginning it has been manned by expert and well-trained assistants to Mr. Shearin, both in its manufacturing line and its office and sales forces.

This plant occupies a large two-story building at 489 Stewart avenue, S. W., where railroad frontage is a big item with it in bringing in solid carloads of petroleum jelly and other raw materials, and likewise in shipping solid carloads of hair dressing and various cosmetics to their distributors, not only over the southern states, but practically all over the United States and into nine foreign countries.

In the beginning—a very modest one—the founders themselves were the only salesmen. Within a few years the business had grown to the point where the first salesman was employed. It has continued to expand, until today a force of salesmen present the quality of the Dolly Dimple line to Atlanta chain stores and jobbers, covering as well scores of points over the entire United States.

Nothing is thought at the laboratory of constant shipments in carload lots to distributors all over the country. There are many fine products in the list—which receive the careful manufacturing attention of the laboratories. These include face creams, skin lotions, face powders, talcum powder, brilliantine, hair tonics, tooth powders, etc.

Visitors to the plant are impressed by the methods of operation and by the extreme care and sanitary conditions that surround every step of production. Visitors are cordially invited to call and inspect the plant whenever it is convenient for them to do so.

Thus coal users can readily see that Blue Rose stoker coal offers comfort, cleanliness, convenience and economy; and specializing as the company does in the two features of preparation and quality, patrons can feel sure there is no better stoker coal to be found than Blue Rose, mined by the New Jellico Coal Company, at Morley, Tenn., on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

New River stoker coal is also widely praised by the widely known coal man.

Hardaway Is Now Featuring Blue Rose Coal

Firm Enthusiastic Over Blue Rose and New River Coal.

R. H. Hardaway, one of the best known coal men in the city, manager of the W. D. Hardaway Coal Company, at 746 Lee street, in West End, grows quite enthusiastic when he talks to you about Blue Rose or New River stoker coal, which is featured by the company.

Speaking of Blue Rose, Mr. Hardaway has this to say:

"Blue Rose stoker coal brings to the householder at the burning season a feeling of satisfaction and cleanliness likened to the rarity and beauty of the blue rose. In the coldest of weather it assures in the home a warm, welcoming cheer, comparable to that found in the tropics.

"Blue Rose is uniformly sized, extremely low in ash and high in heat units. All the burning qualities of this coal are of a nature that will give to its users maximum efficiency throughout the coal-burning season. You are as-

Kryl's Symphony Orchestra At G. M. A. on November 14

Kryl, the famous virtuoso and conductor, has been called by the Los Angeles Times "the most remarkable cornetist in the world," and referred to by the Chicago Tribune, "as a director he is without a peer." He presents to the music-loving public his superb symphony orchestra, comprising an exceptional personnel of artists.

An organization now entering upon its 36th consecutive season, during which period it has presented over 12,600 concerts and has traveled over 1,300,000 miles.

That the educational factor of the concerts by "Kryl and his symphony orchestra" is fully appreciated is demonstrated by the repeat re-engagements, year after year, by colleges and universities where this famous organization has appeared. In recent years "Kryl and his symphony orchestra" have appeared in more than 100 colleges and universities annually.

His symphony orchestra will appear at G. M. A. at 10 a. m., November 14.

New York Times: "Kryl is complete master of the difficult instrument, and conductor of a great organization."

Philadelphia Ledger: "At times the music seemed almost to die away, leaving only the echoes of the pipes of Pan, and then again it swelled with all the fury of a mountain stream, to a volume and mellowness of a great pipe organ."

The South Bend Tribune: "Kryl's orchestra thrilled the audience at Notre Dame. 3,500 students and guests attend concert. The surprising virtuosity of the orchestra made a strong appeal. Orchestra displayed marvelous tone and masterly execution."

The Chatham Daily News, Ontario, Canada: "Kryl Symphony Orchestra Delights Music Lovers—Chatham music lovers thrilled by Bohumir Kryl and his symphony."

"The orchestra gave a program which demonstrated their great artistry and the sympathetic understanding of the master mind of their conductor."

The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.: "Kryl Symphony Delights Big Audience—Bohumir Kryl and his symphony orchestra packed Glenn Memorial Auditorium with an enthusiastic audience Friday night and presented a program which pleasantly surprised even the most critical. Under the leadership of a dynamic man—they excelled themselves. They had an enthusiasm and flexibility in their music which is seldom found in other well-known orchestras."

Atlanta Can Now Boast of 500 Ellis Roofs

A Directory Will Show You Hundreds of Satisfied Customers.

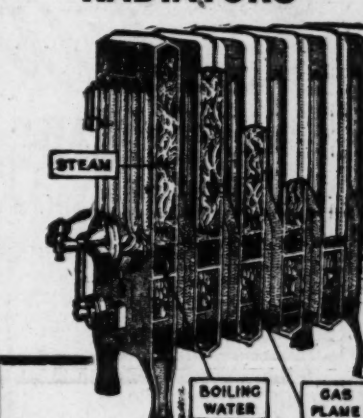

Here's a roofing record that stands out as an achievement to be proud of—and the Ellis Roofing Company, at 686 Greenwood avenue, N. E., is proud of it.

In the six years the company has been established in this city it can point to more than 500 streets and avenues in Atlanta where are located homes and business buildings on which it has applied new roofs. That's a real record—one that Mr. Ellis and his force is proud of—and proud, mainly, because there has not been a dissatisfied patron among all those who have employed them to re-roof between 1,500 and 2,000 buildings.

The company has issued a directory listing the homes and other buildings on which it has given service, and it invites any interested in roofing work to call and secure one of these directories, showing satisfied owners scattered over 400 streets in the Greater Atlanta area. The company asks that you consult any of these satisfied customers, or it can provide you with other names perhaps not in the booklet, that will testify to the dependable work done by Ellis experts.

The Ellis Roofing Company is in a position to handle roofing matters from start to finish and if you are in doubt as to the condition of your roof, call one of its officials or salesmen and it will send an experienced estimator to make an inspection. He will advise you and help you to select the roof best suited to your individual need," Mr. Ellis said.

Chamberlain, Peace Lover, Declared War

During Fighting in Norway, Commons Taunted Him to His Face.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—(P)—It fell to the lot of Neville Chamberlain, who once described himself as "a man of peace from the depths of my soul," to lead the British empire to war against Germany in 1939.

Before this he had been the apostle of "appeasement" and non-intervention in an alarmed Europe, still trying to adjust itself from the effects of the World War.

Once, when war seemed imminent over the acute crisis between Germany and Czechoslovakia, he staved it off at the eleventh hour with the historic "Pact of Munich" with Adolf Hitler.

For this he was hailed in London and throughout most of the world as a hero. But his day of glory was short-lived.

Criticism was quickly mixed with applause; warlike problems were repeatedly presented by Germany, culminating with the invasion of Poland.

Disillusioned at last, the aged prime minister—he was 70 then—resolutely prepared for eventualities.

For the first time in Britain's history she guaranteed the frontiers of eastern Europe; for the first time since the days of Oliver Cromwell she conscripted men in times of nominal peace.

And so, after Hitler's legions had swarmed over Poland, despite Chamberlain's warning of the consequences, he broadcast to the empire, in a firm, but sorrowful voice, Britain's declaration of war.

Once in the war, he devoted himself as wholeheartedly for victory with arms as he had years before striven for peace. But Britain was not prepared; there were staggering problems to be met against the fully prepared Germans. Crises arose in the government; the prime minister met them with outward calm.

As the German war machine rumbled over Poland, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, and Belgium, criticism at home became more voluble and insistent. Reshuffling of the cabinet followed. Winston Churchill was named as war co-ordinator and the tempo was stepped up.

RECORD TUBER—The Devil must have been a'tuggin' at the roots of this championship Gilmer county sweet potato, shown in the hands of Mrs. Herbert Tabor, of Ellijay. Natural in all other particulars, it measures 28 inches from tip to tip. It was grown on the farm of H. M. Towery, of Ellijay.

"Hitler Missed Bus." During the fighting in Norway, Chamberlain proclaimed he was more confident of victory than ever—that "Hitler had missed the bus."

But criticism could not be stifled. In the house of commons, the opposition taunted him to his face that he himself had "missed the bus."

Finally, on May 10, 1940, he resigned and Churchill moved into No. 10 Downing Street. Churchill, who held him in affectionate regard, despite some fundamental differences, retained him in his cabinet as "lord president of the council."

But his influence was waning; there were demands that he step out of the government altogether. On top of this he underwent a serious operation for an abdominal ailment. He returned to his duties after a long rest, his health below par, and on October 3, 1940, resigned—a worn, tired old man, but with a stout heart.

In more peaceful times he was perhaps best known for his work as chancellor of the exchequer and when Stanley Baldwin retired as prime minister in 1937 he was regarded as his logical successor.

Troubled Times. Chamberlain took over the responsibilities at a time when war talk was prevalent in Europe; when undeclared war raged between Japan and China. Spain was torn with a bitter civil war in which Germany and Italy had intervened in behalf of the Fascists.

Delicate diplomatic incidents, involving Britain and her ally, France, rose on several fronts. He steadfastly pursued his policy of appeasement; sought by every means to win the friendship of Germany and Italy. As a result, Anthony Eden, his foreign secretary, resigned.

Lord Halifax took over his portfolio but Chamberlain in effect became the acting foreign minister.

In the midst of growing tension, Germany annexed Austria and Hitler continued to scrap the Treaty of Versailles. The Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia brought the situation to a head in September, 1938, with their demands for self-determination. Danger signals flew. The German army was poised; the Czech army was ready.

Famous Munich Pact. At this juncture, when the world held its breath, Chamberlain dramatically made three trips by airplane—he had never flown before—to meet Hitler face to face.

The Munich pact of September 30, 1938, was the outcome. Czechoslovakia was called upon to meet the Sudeten demands; Germany and Britain agreed not to war against each other.

Repercussions were immediate. Criticism came from England and neutral countries that the Czechs had been "betrayed." But war had been averted.

Chamberlain received a tremendous popular welcome when he returned to London. King George VI thanked him. His appeasement policy was called a personal triumph.

His name was on everyone's lips. The cartoonists had a field day. The tall, somberly dressed statesman, carrying his ever-present umbrella, was pictured in the press of the world. His umbrella became at once a symbol of peace and the object of jibes by news commentators.

But the rejoicing in England had scarcely died down—some misgivings—when the picture began to change. Hitler's troops were on the march; Czechoslovakia was dissolved and brought under Germany's wing.

Hitler's action was a rude blow to Chamberlain. But with French backing, he launched a "peace front" against aggression. Guarantees of protection against unprovoked attack were extended to Poland, Turkey, Rumania and Greece.

Then, just when efforts by England and France to woo Soviet Russia into a treaty seemed bright, the world was astonished when the Soviet-German pact was announced.

Germany's invasion of Poland followed soon thereafter and another European war, less than a year after the Munich pact.

Axis Differs In Comment on Chamberlain

Haw Haw Says He Was Responsible for War on Nazis.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(P)—Comment by the Axis partners on the death of former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain differed today in broadcasts heard here by CBS.

Germany's Lord Haw Haw declared that "German comment emphasizes that the late prime minister was fully responsible for the decision of the British government to declare war on Germany."

The Italian radio declared "there is reason to suppose" Chamberlain declared war against Germany "against his own instinct under pressure from within the Conservative party, especially from the prime war-monger, Mr. Churchill."

"If Mr. Chamberlain had acted on his own instincts, he would have saved himself the fame of being responsible for the fall of the British empire, but unfortunately an eventual political career was marred at its height."

AUSTRALIA PRAISES "STEADFAST HONOR" MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 10.—(P)—Australians feel that Neville Chamberlain "brought to highest office simple directness of mind, cool judgment and steadfastness, the true marks of British character," Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies said in tribute tonight.

"I say thank God for Neville Chamberlain. If he had not humbled himself at Munich and pursued his more than a year's interrupted preparation, we might well now be sharing the fate of France," he declared.

The "eyes" have it, and here's Laraine Day, M-G-M star, lightly brushing mascara to the tips of her lashes to make them look longer and more beautiful.

Mascara Accents Eye Beauty

By Winifred Ware.

The eyes are used constantly except for the hours spent in sleep. Thus the importance of using eye baths to keep the eyes cleansed and refreshed, eye creams and oils to keep the skin around the eyes soft and smooth and prevent age-telling lines. With such care one can keep the eyes looking fresh, sparkling and beautiful.

And what of eye makeup? No longer is it confined to use for evening wear only—it is worn round the clock and provides accent for eye beauty. So many women today wear it with every ensemble, the eye makeup depending, of course, upon the time of day, the occasion and the costume. But regardless of when or where, the favored mascara is one which goes on easily and stays on through rain, snow, or a sad movie.

The one we want to tell you about is just such a mascara. This waterproof mascara, new cream mascara, in fact, becomes a permanent part of your makeup wardrobe, once you try it. The easily applied cream instantly makes the lashes appear longer, silkier and alluringly thick. And one of its most appealing features is the fact that it does not smudge or run, it is unaffected by moisture so that you may wear it through hours of dancing, and though we hope you'll have no occasion for shedding of tears, if you do happen to have need for a few, you may go right ahead without fear of running mascara spoiling the effect.

You'll be pleased with the perfection attained in deepening the color of the lashes and apparent increase of their length. A few deft strokes with this little brush and the eyes seem larger, more luminous and alluringly more soulful and lovely. This little tube of waterproof eyelash mascara is in an attractive cellophane case with a pretty red cap. You won't go wrong on the mascara and you'll be pleased with the moderate price. Call Winifred Ware at WA. 6565 for the name of this cream. Write her at The Constitution, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope if you live out of the city.

THESE WOMEN -- By d'Alessio

"Poor Helen! She named her baby after the victorious congressman; then a recount reversed the election!"

Studio Says No Series For Radio

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 10.—Mickey Rooney and the rest of the "Hardy" family were offered one million dollars by an enthusiastic radio sponsor, but had to turn it down! The idea was to pay the famous film family $25,000 a week for 52 broadcasts. But Metro, where executives are still slightly dazed by the tremendous success achieved by the series, has given a "hands off" command to all commercial exploitation—afraid of possibly disturbing the goose that is laying such golden box-office eggs.

Cary Grant was feeling good the other morning, and he tried to vault over a couple of arc lamps on the set. He didn't quite make it, and contacted the floor quicker than he anticipated. By the way, you know that Cary is 39 years old? Still I don't believe it, even though his age is registered with the British consul here.

The Frank Morgans are supplying the wedding breakfast for Chester Morris and his bride (Lillian Barker) on November 30 at the Morgan mansion. . . Warners are going ahead with scripting of Ann Sheridan's picture, "Maid in Havana," which means they will soon settle on her fight for more money. The studio has gone up to $900 (Ann wants $1,500 weekly). It's my guess they will compromise on $1,250. That amount is paid Priscilla Lane and Olivia de Havilland. . . George Sanders, who plays the saint in the "Saint" detective series, left his car outside a restaurant. When he came out, the headlights had been stolen—and to date have not been retrieved!

Harold Lloyd's 16-year-old daughter, Gloria, is planning a movie career, aided and abetted by her papa. "I think she will be wonderful on the screen," Lloyd told me enthusiastically. "I'm looking around now for a good teacher of dialog, somebody who has done some acting. I want to get her started right. I'll get her small parts in pictures. After that I'll star her in one of my pictures."

At this particular moment, Gloria is winding up a scholastic career at the exclusive Westlake School where Shirley Temple is a pupil. Shirley and Gloria are putting on the school play this year, and rehearsals are currently going on in the Temple house. "They are renting a big hall for the actual performance," Lloyd tells me, then claps a hand over his mouth. "I mustn't tell you any more, it's supposed to be a secret."

Robert Montgomery's outburst against the quality of present-day films may cost him his future as a film actor. When someone on the set of "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" asked Bob what his next picture would be, he shook his head and said, "Doesn't look as though there's going to be another one." I hope his pessimism is unfounded. Montgomery is one of the better actors in Hollywood. It will be too bad if they gang up on him because he had the courage to voice his opinions.

Marlene Dietrich has put in a "must-have" request for photographer Rudolph Mate for her next flicker. Since Rudolph performed the wonderful job on Marlene for "Seven Sinners," all the glamour girls in town are scrambling for him.

"Moss Rose," suggesting a mood of romance—of ruffles and lace and fragrant potpourri—is the name of this new handkerchief design. The moss rosebuds are scattered over a white background with pale pink stripes; the border shows twisted ribbon and a rose color hand-rolled hem. Inspired by the "Moss Rose" beauty aids, the design recalls the gracious charm of leisurely Victorian life.

Vitamin B Essential for Good Health

By Dr. William Brady.

A survey by nutrition authorities in England showed that the diets of half of the population provided less vitamin B than is necessary to maintain health. The minimum daily ration of B1 required to prevent manifestations of deficiency disease is 300 international units—this was arbitrarily fixed as the average daily requirement by the League of Nations Technical Commission before the war.

In America, according to a Department of Agriculture report (Diets of Families of Employed Wage Earners and Clerical Workers in Cities, circ. 507, 1939), notwithstanding plentiful food, the diets of these representative people were found deficient in vitamin D and vitamin B complex, as well as in calcium and vitamin A. In some instances the deficiency was due to lack of purchasing power. In most instances the deficiency was due to lack of knowledge in selecting and using foods which contain these vitamins and minerals in significant proportions.

Right here Ol' Doc Brady, who is not an authority about anything to speak of, begs readers to send for the monograph "Wheat to Eat"—all one has to do is ask for it and inclose a stamped envelope bearing one's address. It tells how and why you should use plain wheat as a staple in your diet and gives recipes and instructions for preparing it.

but in special circumstances it is wise to follow your own dentist's advice about this.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Son: "What does 'malice toward none' mean?"

Father: "It means we should not hate anyone. We might hate the war the Germans are waging, but we should not hate all German people."

Son: "I just hate those old Germans. If a German boy were here now, I'd knock him down just like this."

Father: "That's the stuff, sonny. That's the way to talk!"

It is the responsibility of the present generation to so teach the coming generation that they will be ready to do their part in creating a world where there will be "malice toward none."

Purely Personal Chatter About Atlanta Debutantes

(Editor's Note: This is the eighth of a series of articles appearing every Monday and giving intimate glimpses concerning Atlanta debutantes. The Sally Forth articles will continue through the autumn and winter until the debutante season closes.)

By Sally Forth.

• • • WHEN OLIVE BELL DAVIS, one of the most popular members of the 1940-41 Debutante Club, is formally presented to society by her mother, Mrs. Charles M. Davis, on November 18, a trio of her former schoolmates will be on hand for the important occasion, which will be in the form of an afternoon reception taking place at the Davis residence on Peachtree Battle avenue.

The lovely visiting belles, who will arrive for the affair, are Connie Balfour, of Thomasville; Nadia Barnett, of Jacksonville, Fla.; and Margaret Jamerson, of Charleston, W. Va. Connie and Olive Belle became friends last year at the University of Georgia, where they were popular students. The lovely Atlanta was a classmate of Nadia and Margaret at Arlington Hall in Washington two years ago.

Prior to enrolling at Arlington Hall, the pretty deb attended North Fulton High school. She completed her education at the University, where she was a member of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority and the Glee Club.

In addition to singing, the attractive deb is interested in writing, her chief desire being to create short stories, proof of her talent having appeared when one of her narratives was accepted for publication by the "Georgia Arch," the monthly magazine printed by the University students.

The slender, graceful deb, who possesses dark brown hair and blue eyes, has moments of frivolity, too, as evidenced by her adroitness in horseback riding, golf and badminton.

The selection of Olive Belle to lead the Thanksgiving hop two years ago at the Naval Academy proves her wide popularity, which is due to her gracious and charming personality as well as her keen sense of humor.

At the completion of the debut season, during which time Olive Belle is being entertained extensively, she will doubtless pursue her literary talent, in which Sally predicts the deb will have an unusually successful future.

• • • HERE IS AN "encore" to the circus which made its annual visit here last week. When Charles Winship was a little boy and attended Mrs. Pearce's school in Sarasota, Fla., two of his classmates were John Ringling North and Henry North. When the trio grew to be young men, Charles followed a legal career and John and Henry entered the circus business in the footsteps of their families.

So it was natural then, that when the circus came to town last week, Charles Winship and his wife, Juliette, should entertain informally for the two visitors. The group assembled at the Winship home on Montclair drive for dinner and later attended the circus. In addition to the hosts and honor guests, others enjoying the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Fleet, Mr. and Mrs. Pollard Turman and Mr. and Mrs. L. McCullough.

Miss Barbara Beam Marries Stiles A. Kellett at Church

Miss Barbara Anne Beam became the bride of Stiles Austin Kellett at a brilliant ceremony taking place on Saturday afternoon at Covenant Presbyterian church. Rev. Herman L. Turner officiated at 5:30 o'clock, in the presence of an assemblage of friends and relatives of the couple. A musical program was presented by Robert S. Lowrance, vocalist, and Mrs. Lowrance, organist. The altar was artistically decorated with stately palms forming a background for urns containing white chrysanthemums.

Acting as groomsmen were Todd Neel, John Steele, Leslie J. Stephens, John Steinhauer and Everett Gorbandt. Dan Neel was best man and Leslie J. Stephens, of the bride's family, was maid of honor. She wore a cluster of blue net roses in her hair and carried a bouquet of orange and yellow chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaids, Mesdames J. Harris Dew, Leslie J. Stephens, Everett Gorbandt, Misses Frances Bone and Eleanor Deas, wore gowns styled like the maid of honor's, and they carried similar bouquets. The petite and dainty bride was given in marriage by her father, Samuel Henry Beam Jr. Her gown of lustrous white satin was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and long sleeves, and a bouffant skirt which extended to form a long train. Her veil of illusion tulle, which belonged to Mrs. Leslie Stephens, was attached to her hair by a coronet of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was an exquisite pearl pin. She carried a bouquet of purple orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Beam chose for her daughter's wedding a gown of royal blue crepe trimmed with sequins. Completing her outfit was a black hat with sequins and a cluster of orchids adorned her shoulder. Mrs. P. A. Kellett, the groom's mother, wore a becoming model of wine crepe fashioned with a wine and gold lace bodice. She wore a matching hat and a shoulder spray of orchids.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Beam, the bride's parents, entertained at a reception at their home on Oxford road. Mrs. W. R. House assisted the hosts in entertaining.

Mr. Kellett and his bride left for a wedding trip to New Orleans and upon their return they will reside at 1206 Peachtree street, northeast. Mrs. Kellett donned for traveling a smart brown crepe topped with a turquoise jacket. Completing her outfit was a brown squirrel coat and brown accessories. STAR STRUCK

By SYLVIA TAYLOR

Allan Tells Glory He Went to Mexico To Settle Things With Mona Greer.

SYNOPSIS. Glory Stevens tears off her wedding gown, leaving the bride party waiting at the church, and just catches a train for Los Angeles and Hollywood. Since she has wanted to be an actress like her mother who died when Glory was 13. In the Pullman dressing room she meets Helen Jamison, who has won some recognition as a character actress. She advises Glory to return home, then, calling herself a fool, suggests that she take an inexpensive apartment next to hers. Glory makes the studio rounds daily until her money is gone, then Helen urges Scottie Weston, her own agent, to discourage the girl and send her home. Instead he gets her a job in the Sunset studio wardrobe department, but the very first day a pin in a jacket sleeves scratches Mona Greer, and that temperamental star has Glory discharged. Scottie sends Glory to dramatic school and she is constantly with him at important night spots, wearing gowns designed by William Van Lingham, Scottie's chief designer. After Mark Spencer, Scottie's handsome young lawyer, meets Glory he is with her daily. Allan Rhodes, popular movie lover, plays with her in a screen test and they fall in love. And all the time Scottie is in love with her. Glory gets small parts in two pictures and moves to a smart apartment. Allan leaves Hollywood on business, he says, and Glory is distracted until he phones her on her birthday. When he returns, he gives her a beautiful diamond ring. She says she doesn't think she should accept it, and he tells her it is an engagement ring. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XVII.

"I don't see what that has to do with Allan," she flared. "You don't want to see," Scottie said, sadly.

When he was gone and Allan had returned to the table he asked, "You didn't tell him?"

"He guessed it, Allan, and I couldn't lie to him. But he promised not to tell."

"I thought it might be better to wait until we could make definite plans," Allan said, frowning. Glory was relieved.

"We both have many other things to think about just now," she admitted. "But after all we are engaged."

His smile warmed her heart. Then suddenly it occurred to her that Allan had not told her where he went on his mysterious vacation. She had been so hurt by that gossip column, which insinuated that Allan had deserted her for Mona Greer. They were engaged now so that Glory felt she had a right to know where he had been. If Allan understood he would want to protect her from malicious gossip.

"You haven't told me yet where you were last week," she reminded him, trying to make her question casual.

Allan's smile faded but he did not hesitate. "I was in Mexico."

"Mexico?"

"Yes. And I did see Mona Greer, if that's what you're trying to find out."

"Oh Allan!" she cried.

"Why can't you trust me, Glory?"

"Relief made Glory weak. 'Every one tried to make something out of it,' she said."

"Naturally they wouldn't know my reasons," Allan explained, "but I didn't think you'd doubt me, Glory!"

"When you didn't telephone me I didn't know what to think."

"Things were too complicated . . . but after all, sweet, you shouldn't be jealous of a woman who means nothing to me."

How logical it all seemed now, Glory thought, ashamed of her disloyalty. Why did she let herself be influenced by idle gossip? If she had only trusted Allan she could have saved herself much unnecessary heartache.

"I'll never doubt you again," she promised. Dear Allan! He had gone all the way to Mexico just to let Mona Greer understand the situation! How wonderful to realize that she never need to worry about it again.

The orchestra was playing their favorite piece and they rose to dance. The music, the lights and the gay chatter delighted Glory's heart. There were all kinds of people here. Curious visitors from out of town hoping for a glimpse of a celebrity. Young couples who had probably been saving their money for weeks to come, and many who, like themselves, appeared at the famous night spot frequently. Actors and directors were scattered among the tables. Allan nodded a greeting to each. No matter where he was or what he was doing, Allan always remembered to speak to the "right people." It was a ritual with him but he was never high-hat or snobbish to those who weren't. He signed autograph books as if it were the greatest pleasure he had.

The days that followed passed like a dream. Glory worked during the day and spent the evenings with Allan making the rounds of their favorite places. The square-cut sapphire ring on her third finger caused many comments but Scottie kept his promise not to release the news of their engagement.

Two months went by but Allan had not mentioned definite plans for their marriage. Glory wished that they could settle it but Allan seemed to be too busy to think about getting married. Meanwhile Glory had finished her second picture and was to have a short vacation.

"Look, sweet," Allan said one rainy night as they sat before her mirrored fireplace. "I have to make a personal appearance in San Francisco next week. Why don't you go up with me?"

"We'll have to take Helen," Glory said, "and I don't know if she can get away."

"Must we have Helen?" Allan frowned. "After all, we're engaged."

"Even so," Glory insisted, "I can't go without a chaperone."

Allan flashed her a mocking smile. "All right, little puritan!"

Helen was not enthusiastic when informed of the idea. "I can get away," she told Glory, "but I'm not anxious to go anywhere with Allan Rhodes!"

"Oh please, Helen. I've never been to San Francisco and you know I won't go without you."

Helen laughed. "Since you put it that way I guess I'll have to go."

The next day found Glory at the studio having a fitting for some new clothes.

"I wish I could take a vacation," Van said, taking another tuck in a red chiffon.

Glory gazed at her reflection in the long mirror. Allan would love this dress. Red was his favorite color.

"I'm a wreck," Van continued. "Mona Greer was just in here making a scene as usual."

"Mona Greer! Is she back from Mexico?"

"And how!" Van said wearily. "That woman tears through this place like a cyclone. She's furious about you and Allan, Glory."

"That's too bad," Glory said calmly.

"Too bad for you!" Van corrected. "She's told every one all over town that she's going to get Allan back and she'll probably do it too. You don't know her, Glory, there's nothing she won't do."

"I'm not afraid of Mona Greer," Glory insisted—but with his words she had felt an ominous chill sweep across her heart.

Glory decided it would be better not to tell Allan that she knew Mona was back in town. She didn't want anything to spoil their trip to San Francisco. But Van Lingham's words still ringing in her ears made her uneasy. Was it true that Mona's hold on Allan was strong enough to get him back even after he was engaged to her? Didn't Mona Greer have any more pride than to run after a man!

Tillie was packing Glory's bags. "You-all going to take any evening dresses, Miss Glory?"

Glory selected a new black silk jersey, sure that Allan would like its bizarre lines.

"Come on, baby," Helen called from her room. "We're to meet Allan at Glendale in twenty minutes."
